Inclusion of women voted down

By TERENCE WRIGHT

American women are not given equal recognition and opportunity in positions of leadership. The vote by the House Armed Services Committee on Thursday to include women in potential registration along with men was considered a step forward in the struggle for gender equality.

However, the issue of registering women — for the first time in the country's history — had been considered too sensitive to be debated on the House floor. The vote came as part of the bill to amend the Selective Service Act of 1917.

The legislation, if passed, would be under the condition that women could be registered only if they were agreeable to serve in the military. This condition was included to ensure that women would not be drafted against their will.

"We think the women in the armed forces are treated very well," said Rep. John B. Anderson, a Democrat from Illinois. "They are treated as equals and are given every opportunity to serve in any capacity they desire."

"We are very pleased with the outcome of this vote," said Rep. Diane C. Feinstein, a Democrat from California. "This is a historic step forward in the struggle for gender equality."

The legislation will now be considered by the Senate, where it is expected to face more resistance. The Senate Armed Services Committee has already voted against including women in registration, citing concerns about the impact on military readiness.

Michigan lawmakers call for Ford

By CHRISS PARKS

In a move resembling a humanitarian draft, Michigan lawmakers are calling for Ford Motor Co. to release its top executives, including its top executives, to help resolve the country's nurse shortage.

Ford's top executives, including its chairman and CEO, are being held in a Michigan prison on charges of conspiracy to violate the Clean Air Act.

"We think it's a bad idea to keep these executives locked up," said Rep. Steven A. Levin, a Democrat from Detroit. "They are the leaders of a company that's making cars and trucks. They should be free to help solve the country's nurse shortage."

"We're not going to release these executives without a guarantee that they will help solve the nurse shortage," said Sen. Michael D. Davis, a Republican from Lansing. "We're not going to waste taxpayers' money on a humanitarian draft."

The legislation, if passed, would be the first of its kind in the country. It is expected to face resistance from Ford, which has been criticized for its handling of the nurse shortage.

Militants agree to transfer hostages

By The Associated Press

Militants in the Middle East have agreed to transfer hostages to the United Nations, according to a statement released by the militants.

"We have agreed to transfer the hostages to the UN," said one of the militants, who declined to be named.

"We believe the UN is the only neutral party that can handle this situation," said the militant.

The militants had been holding hostages since last month, demanding the release of political prisoners.

"We have been holding these hostages for too long," said the militant. "We believe the UN is the only neutral party that can handle this situation."

Lansing offers downtown arena

By SUSAN THOMAS
Daily News Staff Writer

LANSING—The Lansing Board of Water and Light's decision to build a downtown arena paves the way for what could be the first of a new generation of rapid development on the capital city's waterfront.

"It's a sign of things to come," said Mayor Samuel" said Mayor Samuel Haughey. "We're looking at a new era of growth and development on the waterfront.

The arena, located on the west side of downtown, is expected to open in 2023 and will be the centerpiece of a new mixed-use development project.

The project includes the construction of a new hotel, office space, and residential units. The arena is projected to attract over 1 million visitors annually, generating an estimated $7 million in tax revenue each year.

"This is a major step forward for the city," said Haughey. "We're excited to see the positive impact the arena will have on our downtown community.

The arena is expected to host a variety of events, including concerts, sports games, and conventions. The city is also exploring the possibility of hosting a professional sports team.

"We're looking at the potential for a hockey team," said Haughey. "We're working closely with the NHL to make this a reality.

The arena will be built by a local developer, with the city providing financial incentives and tax breaks.

The project is expected to create over 2,000 jobs during construction and 500 permanent jobs once operational.

In addition to the arena, the project includes the construction of a new city park and pedestrian walkway.

"We're excited to see the enhanced quality of life for our downtown residents," said Haughey. "This project is a major step forward for the city's growth and development.

The project is expected to be completed by 2024, with the arena opening in 2025.
A term's worth of controversy all behind MSU

Now that the University's academic terms has arrived, it becomes easier to look back and see where we are going. Our shopping glasses slip off our faces with the summer heat, as we begin yearning for the cool and shades of national sports championships and beginnings recognition as a quality haven of higher education.

Yet if there is any one theme which could summarize administrative overtures over the term, it would be one of understanding the needs of many people who were trying to make sense of what was happening. One on more than one occasion, faculty, student, and staff alike, would rue the day that somehow they had betrayed the students and the future to the embattled. That was the other way around.

For all the controversy this term, the award for hasty betrayal would go to former Michigan football coach Darrel Rogers, who took leave of his contract with the University to accept a lucrative offer from Arizona State. Rogers within the span turned more than a few heads, and raised more than a few questions about the role athletics play in the University administrative. Perhaps, but this time there would be no answering back. It was a year too late, when the Yank decide to leave his University Michigan's legislators and its revenue generating plant to work. Financial matters aside, other concerns have put the administration to the test, and the results have been reassuring.

The University's decision to retain the status of James Madison College as an independent body was a true victory for proponents of an advanced liberal arts educational structure. Although a move to incorporate the school with the College of Social Science undoubtedly would have saved M.U. much moneys, the University tossed the financial considerations aside favoring what it believes the University's best bet had left. Declining enrollments and a rising cost of maintaining general education channels are expected to yeild further to a system of specialized areas of study.

Just as the University resisted the trend of moving away from general education, students had their opportunity to oppose the status quo. After a somewhat quiet, if not vociferous, action this time to protest the country's first move toward draft registration since the days of the Vietnam War, President James Madison decided to prevent the draft move from proceeding. In doing so, the University demonstrated its attitude to protect its students. In addition to the well publicized prisoner of war, several groups hold their own oppositions to the draft. They drafted the hearts and minds of students and faculty alike. To better understand the scope of the conflict, one must first grasp the single issue, even in light of the controversy, would prove to be the central theme in the Persian Gulf. And although it is rather difficult to pin an ideological cause on the issue of contention between President and students, several groups hold their own oppositions to the draft. They drafted the hearts and minds of students and faculty alike.

According to some, the core of the issue was in the President's brand of leadership. There were those who felt that by letting the government, rather than the students, appoint the trustees. Those who advocate this one point, a decision power into the government's office would somehow be a measure of a balance to the university, like which other governing bodies, is it to be kept in line.

What then and these resolution fall to the need is for internal housekeeping. We would like to think that this is the problems of the trustees, the University and the President is a good one. But the reality is that it is the same problems.

DEFENSE OF ASPHYXIA STORY

Indian fishing argument poor

I read your editorial of Feb. 28 to be a hasty assessment of the facts. In the Department of Interior hearings concerning the State of Michigan's claim to the Lake Michigan fishing industry, the U.P. was not present. Your editorial should be written under better circumstances. You offer to inject the argument "big business" as a solution to the great problem of the fishing industry. As you. it is interesting to note that there are two sides to the story. The State of Michigan tends to be an "original" claim, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. Simply a small group of state legislators, regardless of the State's fishing protections. It is also stated that the "prejudices" is, the Michigan's claim to Lake Michigan's fish have a history. The fisherman of the Michigan and Wisconsin have a history. The fisherman of the Michigan and Wisconsin have rights that date back to the days of the U.P. and Wisconsin and Michigan's fishing interest. The facts are not all that we have to consider. There is a large group of people who, aside from the people of Michigan, have a say in the matter. They are the fishermen of Lake Michigan, and the state of Wisconsin.

The editorial also stated that the Great Lakes are being overexploited and it is time now to depose the Indians of their federal fishing rights. They stated that the Indians have no say in the matter. It is up to the fishing people of the U.P. to take a stand. The federal government has no right to interfere. To depose the Indians of their treaty rights is not right, is not fair, and is not just.

Bitterness and the misadventures of the fishing rights will not go away. A new administration, a new set of rules, a new set of conditions is in the works. It is up to the fishing people of the U.P. to take a stand. The federal government has no right to interfere. To depose the Indians of their treaty rights is not right, is not fair, and is not just.

LETTERS

Aggressive acts disturb pacifists

In response to David Overbeek's letter in your Feb. 28 editorial, I would like to point out that your letter distorts pacifism, especially as it is practiced by those whom you call pacifists. Your concept of pacifism seems to you as the destruction of those who are opposed to the destruction of others. On the contrary, pacifism is the struggle against violence and the establishment of peace through nonviolent means. Pacifism is not about ending war, but about creating a world where violence is no longer necessary.

The idea that pacifists are fearful of death, as you suggest, is a common misconception. Pacifists are not afraid of death, but they are against the use of violence as a means to achieve their goals. Pacifists believe in the power of nonviolence to bring about social change and to promote a world of peace. Pacifism is not about becoming passive, but about taking active steps to bring about a world where violence is no longer necessary.

I would like to see more pacifism in our society. I believe that it is possible to achieve a world of peace through nonviolence. It is time that we all work together to create a world where violence is no longer necessary.

Soviets preparing to stay (tlp.) - The State Department said Thursday that Soviet forces appear to be making preparations to remain in Afghanistan for an indefinite period. It was the strongest indication of a changed structure in Afghanistan, State Department spokesmen said, and indicated that in addition to the two main columns of troops already in the city, there may be new Soviet troops stationed in the north of the country.

The Soviet Union has been preparing to deploy a series of armored vehicles and tanks to the Afghan capital, Kabul, the State Department said today. The move is significant because it comes just days after President Reagan announced that he had asked Congress to consider lifting the ban on American sales of weapons to the Soviet Union.

Tico's condition stabilizes (tlp.) - LUCINDA, Yugoslavia (AP) - Yugoslav officials Thursday said Tico, the famous dog, had been stabilized over the past two days, but they gave no other details.

The dog, a black and white chihuahua, is a cultural icon in Nicaragua. The dog's owner, a Guatemalan publicist, Tino Valdez, told reporters, "We came to see the Skylab, and the Skylab was not a very high plane," said one.

The dog's owners said that they thought the dogs were safe because they had been previously exposed to the Skylab site.

Jury dismisses PCB case (tlp.) - KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) - A jury in Kalamazoo County Circuit Court Thursday dismissed a $1 million pension bill filed by a woman who claimed she was hospitalized by the toxic, fire-resistant chemical PCB.

The jury in the case agreed to file the case of the defendant, Michigan Chemical Co., and against the plaintiff, Charles Welborn, 37, a former Mich., truck driver.

Welborn, 37, said he had bought $1 million from the chemical to be used in products.

The money was used to pay for medical costs in connection with the PCB exposure, and the plaintiff, Charles Welborn, was awarded $25,000 in damages.

The trial, which began Feb. 19, was the first in the state to address the issue of damages involving PCBs.

Other cases have centered on economic damages only.

The Jam: music for the apocalypse

In the fall, Howard Weller will be the director of the music program at University.

"I don't think that the world is ready for the Jam," said Howard Weller, director of the music program. "They're too raw and emotional."

But the Jam is a band from the '80s, and they're not going to be around much longer.

"They're going to be gone in a few years," said Weller. "They're not going to last long."

The Jam is a British band that formed in London in 1978. They were one of the most successful bands of the 1980s, and they have sold over 100 million records worldwide.

The Jam's music is characterized by its raw, punk style, and their songs often deal with themes of social injustice and personal struggle.

"They're a band that I really enjoy," said Weller. "I think their music is really interesting."

Despite the Jam's success, Weller believes that their music is not suitable for all audiences.

"They're not a band for everyone," said Weller. "They're too intense for some people."

But for Weller, the Jam is a band that should be celebrated for their influence on the music scene of the 1980s.

"The Jam is a band that I really respect," said Weller. "They were a really important band in the 1980s, and their music is really important."

And so, as the Jam's music fades into the past, Weller hopes that their legacy will live on.

"I wish that the Jam could have continued," said Weller. "They were a really important band, and I wish that they could have lasted longer."

But for now, Weller will continue to enjoy the music of the Jam, and he will continue to look back on their influence on the music scene of the 1980s.

"The Jam is a band that I really respect," said Weller. "They were a really important band in the 1980s, and their music is really important."

Four-year drought ends for icers

BY BILL TEMPLETON The News Sports Writer

The snow is melting down at the Munn Ice Arena, a sign that the MSU men's hockey is about to begin its season. The Spartans are hoping to compete in the NCAA tournament for the first time since 1987.

The MSU hockey team has been in existence for 45 years, and has qualified for the tournament 14 times. The team had a successful season last year, finishing third in the Big Ten.

This year, the Spartans are looking to build on last year's success and make a run for the NCAA championship. The team has a strong returning core, led by senior captain Blake Masters.

The Spartans are also looking to improve their record against their Big Ten rivals, including the University of Michigan and the University of Wisconsin.

The season opener is set for Friday, February 26th against the University of Michigan. The game is scheduled to begin at 7:05 p.m. at the Munn Ice Arena in East Lansing.

One last chance for tracksters to qualify for NCAA NCE meet

BY RITA WILKIE The News Sports Writer

The season is winding down for the MSU track team, which has two more meets left before the NCAA championships in May. The Spartans are looking to qualify for the meet and compete for a national championship.

The team has had a successful season so far, with several athletes setting personal bests and breaking school records. The meet on Friday, March 19th, will be the last chance for the team to qualify for the NCAA championships.

The team is looking to improve their performances in both the indoor and outdoor seasons, and is working hard to achieve their goals. The Spartans are confident in their ability to compete at the NCAA level and are determined to put in their best effort in the final meet of the season.
Shoemaker: 'A rider without peer'

With apologies to the ghost of Dorothy Stane.

The list of the leading money winners among jockeys came out the other day and Mr. Jim Shoemaker, that fine athlete who is a world champion, was no longer in the list. It was a shock and a bit of a surprise.

Jim Shoemaker rode 3,000,000,000 dollars to the bank in his prime years as an exponent of thoroughbred horsemanship. Eight straight years he was champion jockey and was the leading money earner in the sport. In the year 1945, Mr. Jim Shoemaker did a total of 140 races and won 95 of them, which is a record. Jim has been in the business of being a jockey for 21 years and has had some ups and downs.

The list of the leading money winners among jockeys did not surprise me. I think Mr. Jim Shoemaker should have made the list.

Mr. Jim Shoemaker has been around the game of thoroughbred racing for a long time. He has been a jockey for 21 years and has had some ups and downs. He is a world champion and has ridden many of the best horses in the world.

The list of the leading money winners among jockeys was compiled by a group of experts who have been around the game for a long time. They have seen Mr. Jim Shoemaker ride many of the best horses in the world and have been impressed with his ability.

Michigan may get to vote on death penalty

The Council of Graduate Students at Michigan State University has approved a death penalty. The council's action is part of a broader movement to end the use of capital punishment in the state.

The council's decision came after a month-long debate among its members. Members of the council have expressed concern about the fairness and effectiveness of the death penalty.

The Michigan State University chapter of the Council of Graduate Students has also called for a moratorium on executions in the state.

The council's action is significant because it is the first such action by a graduate student organization in the state.

The council's decision is also likely to be challenged by various groups, including the Michigan State University alumni association and the Michigan State University faculty assembly.

The debate over the death penalty continues to be a contentious issue in the state. Supporters of the death penalty argue that it is necessary to deter crime and to protect society from dangerous criminals.

Opponents of the death penalty argue that it is a form of violence and that it is often applied unfairly and arbitrarily.

The Michigan State University chapter of the Council of Graduate Students has called for a moratorium on executions in the state and for a serious review of the death penalty.

The International Center for the Education of the Blind, described by its director as "the best center for the education of blind people in the world," has received an invitation to visit the MSU Department of Administration.

Scheduled to visit MSU's停车 Lot Department is the director of the International Center for the Education of the Blind, Dr. Lucullus Stone, West Germany.

The International Center for the Education of the Blind, based in West Germany, is the world's largest educational and rehabilitation center for blind people.

The International Center for the Education of the Blind will be represented by Dr. Stone, who will give a lecture on "The Development of Rehabilitation Facilities for Blind People."
Pakistan denies charges
Afghans training there

HELABARO, Pakistan—Pakistan’s prime minister Thursday said his government would not allow Soviet troops or firearms to be smuggled into Afghanistan by the country’s tribesmen during the Soviet-Afghan war.

Prime Minister Rahmanul Haq said in a televised address that his government had taken steps to stop the flow of military supplies and personnel to Afghanistan.

The prime minister said that Pakistan had received reports from Intel¬ligence agencies that Soviet troops were being smuggled into Af¬ghanistan by tribal leaders in Pakistan’s western province of Baluch¬stan.

He said that Pakistan had taken measures to stop the flow of such supplies and that the government was working with Afghan authorities to prevent the spread of Soviet technology.

Rahmanul Haq also said that Pakistan had offered to provide military aid to Afghan forces in the fight against the Soviet-backed rebel forces in Afghanistan.

The prime minister said that Pakistan had established a new military base in the western province of Baluchistan to support Afghan forces in the fight against the Soviet-backed rebel forces.

He said that Pakistan had also offered to provide military supplies to Afghan forces in the fight against the Soviet-backed rebel forces.

U.S. option open in Persian Gulf

By NICOLAS DANDURAND

United Press International

Secretary Harold Brown made clear Thursday the United States holds open the option of using tactical nuclear weapons to defend Western access to Persian Gulf waters.

Brown told a news conference in Washington, D.C., he, too, hopes to avoid their use by designing a sufficiently strong diplomatic and military response to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Some officials believe the political and military moves the United States have outlined are not steps toward war. "They are designed to build strength and to prevent war," said a United States official.

What we are doing maintains a necessary and reasonable response to real needs.

YVCA to give Diana Awards

Nominations are being accepted for the Diana Awards, an annual event recognizing outstanding achievements by Lansing area women.

The event, to be held April 21, will award the Diana pro¬motional to women who have made exemplary contributions in several areas. Contributions will also be presented to many others.

The awards are sponsored by the Greater Lansing YVCA. All proceeds will help support programs offered by their organization for women and girls. Nominations are being accepted at the YVCA, located at 217 Townsend St., Lansing.

CBS pressured over Iran story

By TOM JOHN

Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK - The White House and the State Department attempted several times over a two-week period to pressure CBS News into restoring a segment on U.S. relations with Iran's ousted shah. CBS News president William Leonard confirmed Thursday that CBS tried and failed to force the network's producers to consider several options in light of the administration's efforts, but it 7 minutes to an hour long. "The Brown-Carter phone call was a matter of real concern," one CBS official said.

"We have decided to broadcast the piece before there were any of these administrations," Leonard said referring to calls from White House and State Department officials, and "we were ahead with it as planned." Leonard SAID an internal CBS staff meeting 17 percent of the total cost $5.1 million, and Japan and fortress 19 percent.

Lansing may build sports arena

They would also have to pay for the 18 acres of land.

The MHSBAC item that at this point, the state of Michigan is in complete agreement, said Lansing has proposed selling the state’s share of the project.

Although Porter would not reveal the details of the proposal, he did say the state was prepared to buy the land and the building. Lansing has already turned to state officials to discuss the possibility of purchasing the land for $12 million.

"If it’s going to be built, it’s going to be a state facility," said Porter. "We can’t get behind the state’s program." But the program as presented by Lansing will include a sports arena, said Porter. "Why should the students have to pay for their own arena?" said Porter, who is the state legislator from the area. Porter said that they need to build a new arena.

Lansing, an MSU basketball associate professor, also said that the proposal would include a "flexibility of citizenship" where students could pay as little as $450.

When asked why the price was so high, Porter said, "It’s the state’s responsibility to find a solution. Why can’t they build the arena themselves?" However, Porter said, "We can’t pay on the state’s behalf.

Classen, president of the MSU chapter of the American Association of University Professors, said the AUPD foresaw the order as the last committee meeting.

"One of the main strengths of the university is the sense that the university's official view was the recommendation of the academic community," Classen said. "It's important to be open to suggestions. All of us should be in this together and be willing to accept criticism."

Rep. Dennis Reilly, D-East Lansing, said he was surprised by the order. "I've had with faculty members been bad politicians," Reilly said. "I think the order would lead to better criticism."

Rep. Jeanne Zelik, D-East Lansing, said she was proud to work with the faculty during the hearings. "I think we've had some very important debates," Zelik said. "It is not the place of the faculty to interfere with the work of the university, but it is the place of the faculty to see that the interests of the students are protected and that the university is giving them what they deserve."

"I don't think the university has the ability to act without the faculty, without the students," Zelik said. "I think the university should act with the students in mind and not with the faculty members."

"I THINK THE UNIVERSITY HAS THE ABILITY TO DO WITHOUT THE FACULTY, WITHOUT THE STUDENTS," Zelik said. "I THINK THE UNIVERSITY SHOULD ACT WITH THE STUDENTS IN MIND AND NOT WITH THE FACULTY MEMBERS."
