A coal-burning power plant has been ordered to stop burning oil in response to an environmental lawsuit filed by the Natural Resources Defense Council.

The plant, located in the city of Lansing, is owned by the Michigan Energy Corp., which began burning oil in 1980 as a way to reduce air pollution.

The company contends that burning oil is cheaper than using coal, but environmentalists argue that it is more harmful to the environment.

"We are thrilled that the court has taken this step to protect the people of Michigan," said John Cogan, executive director of the Natural Resources Defense Council.

The company has the option to appeal the decision, but it is unlikely to do so given the environmental impact of oil burning.

"We believe the court has made the right decision, and we will continue to work with the company to ensure that it is in compliance with the law," Cogan said.

GM will test burn oil, PCB mix despite pleas of citizens' group

The General Motors Corp. will conduct tests on a PCB-contaminated oil storage tank at its Detroit plant, despite appeals from citizens' groups to stop the tests.

The company plans to burn the oil in the tank, which is located in a residential area, in order to test the oil's characteristics.

"We believe the tests are necessary to ensure the safety of the community," said a GM spokesman.

Citizens' groups have called on the company to stop the tests, saying that they are a danger to public health.

"We will continue to fight against the testing of this oil, which poses a serious threat to our community," said John Smith, executive director of the Detroit-based Citizens for a Safe Environment.

Mackey defends ticket policy of giving benefactors priority

By THOMAS J. HILL

The Mackey Administration has defended its ticket policy that gives priority to benefactors over the general public.

"We believe in giving back to those who have contributed to our success," said Governor Mackey.

The policy has been criticized by some who say that it favors the wealthy and disproportionately benefits those who have donated to the university.

"We believe in rewarding those who have contributed to our financial success," said Mackey.

Noted lawyer will talk on 1954 'Brown' case

The lawyer has worked with a variety of civil rights organizations and has been instrumental in bringing about legal changes that have improved the lives of many Americans.

"We must continue to fight against racism and discrimination," said the lawyer.
Jimmy Carter has a knack for literally calling issues the way they are. He called the Soviet Union the "arsenal of democracy," and the world applauded his honesty and clairvoyance. His handling of the Iranian hostage crisis seemed to be in harmony with the position of the vast majority of Americans. He has in the last three years or so taken a number of actions that will be remembered as a great achievement.

‘La Cage’ is hilariously absurd
by WILLIAM BARNARD

When the Europeans wanted to make a movie about a gay club, they didn’t mess around. They made ‘La Cage aux Folles’ (title means ‘Birds of a Feather’), directed by the playwright Terence Rattigan, who, among other things, wrote ‘The Front Page.’ ‘La Cage’ is a story of a Parisian gay club run by a feisty elderly man named Didi, who has been running the club for 25 years. The club is popular and profitable, but Didi’s daughter, Marius, is not pleased with her father’s lifestyle. She wants him to retire and take over the business. Didi agrees to retire, but only if she can find a proper replacement. He finds the perfect replacement in the person of a young and handsome man named Yvan, who is also gay. Yvan agrees to take over the club, but only if he can have Didi’s help in making the transition. The story unfolds as Yvan tries to maintain the success of the club while also trying to fit in with the other patrons. It’s a funny and touching story about acceptance and love. The actors are excellent, and the direction is superb. It’s a must-see for anyone who enjoys a good laugh and a good time.
