"The Miehle"

Stands at the front in producing all kinds of work. There is, however, no class of work which tests the fine qualities of a printing press as does this colored work; for the register must be absolutely perfect, the ink distribution correct, the impression strong, the movement smooth, the speed of the bed uniform, as well as an absolutely harmonious uniformity of speed of bed and cylinder. The true mechanical movements, the general construction, and, not least, the fine workmanship, for which the "Miehle" is noted, all combined, make it possible to produce such work in a paying way....
