

This shows very distinctly the new casque for the French cavalry. It differs essentially from the infantry, both in the extended form over the back of the neck and also in the bronze chin strap. These cavaliers have the appearance of the chorus in a Wagner opera.

(Photograph sent from Paris by Carolyn Wilson, war correspondent of The Tribune.)

The latest picture of the king of the Belgians, who recently made a review of the French lines from beginning to the end. He was received at Nancy by President Poincare and several generals of the staff and escorted along the front. He is here shown talking to Gen. Dubois, and at the left are Gen. Joffre and President Poincare.
