

AN EXCITING SPILL during the ice hockey game between the New York Americans and Pittsburgh Pirates in Madison Square garden recently. It was the first home victory in the National Hockey league for the New Yorkers, and they pleased the fans with a spectacular triumph, 3 goals to 1. Professional hockey is going big in New York, and a large throng attended the opener. (Photograph from Underwood and Underwood.)

FRANCE'S NEW AMBASSADOR to the United States, Henry Berenger, and Mme. Berenger. He is considered one of France's foremost financial authorities. He is charged with the special mission of taking up the debt negotiations which ended with the departure from the United States of Joseph Caillaux, on whose commission M. Berenger was a member. WEST DEFEATS EAST in football game at San Francisco staged by the Shriners for the benefit of the Hospital for Crippled Children. Some 25,000 persons saw two of the greatest all-star teams ever gathered together in action. Wyckoff, former Georgia State back, playing with the East, is shown here starting around his right end during the first quarter. Walter Eckersall, The Tribune's football authority, who refereed the battle, is close at hand ready to blow the whistle. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

SKIS FOR SOLDIERS are used by the army of Sweden in its training. Lightly skimming over the deep snows with rifles or machine gun parts slung over their shoulders, these troopers can cover long distances with comparative ease and speed. Some of them are shown here at target practice, supporting their rifles by means of their skis. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

LITTLE MISS BARBARA McLAUGHLIN, baby daughter of Major and Mrs. Frederic McLaughlin of Chicago, seems to be pleased about something, perhaps the visit of Santa Claus. Her mother is the former Irene Castle, who gave up her career as a dancer on her marriage to Major McLaughlin on Thanksgiving eve, 1923. (Photograph from International.)
