

A New Air Thriller

AL WILSON

"THIS IS POSITIVELY THE LAST THING IN AVIATION," said Miss Ruth Law, the aviatrix, when she brought these photographs to The Tribune the other day. The stunt pictured was performed in California for Miss Law's benefit by Al Wilson, civilian flying instructor at Los Angeles, assisted by Lieuts. Hoyt and Remlin. Wilson climbed to the top of his plane, stood upright, grasped the lower wing of another plane as it passed above, and swung himself aboard. The feat was performed entirely without the aid of the ladder, rope or other contrivance which flyers have used heretofore in attempting the exploit.
