had been promised by Villa to lend the party a hand in Chihuahua, where the hold-up was to be made. The time was appointed for the robbery to be committed at midnight. Over a large area there were hotly contesting, and the army had not been able to quiet the violence. The country was near a state of revolution, and the army was fighting to keep order.

The men who were to rob the party were selected with care. Villa chose them from the ranks of his followers, and they were furnished with the necessary equipment. The plan was to rob the party at midnight, and then to make their escape before the army could arrive.

The party was delayed by Villa's men, who rolled boulders across the road and blocked the way. The army was unable to make headway, and the party was able to escape unharmed.

JUDGE CONVICTS NEWSPAPER MEN

Federal-Jurist Fines New York City Editor and Report- er for Contempt.

WILSON OFFERED PARISH

Refusal to Deny Source of Smuggling News Bans for Court's Decision.

New York, Dec. 30—Glover Burch, city editor of the New York World, was fined $500 and sentence to serve a term in Sing Sing prison today by Federal Judge C. S. Carter for contempt.

The judge ruled that Burch will not be allowed to divulge the source of the news story which appeared in his paper today.

At the time of the hearing it was disclosed that Burch has been under investigation for several months by the Federal government, and that he has been refused permission to write articles on the subject.

At the hearing the judge said: "I do not propose to go into the merits of this case at this time, but I do propose to say that I have been under investigation for several months by the Federal government, and that I have refused permission to write articles on the subject.

In my opinion, it is impossible for the government to prove that I have written articles on the subject.

The party was delayed by Villa's men, who roll-boulders across the road and blocked the way. The army was unable to make headway, and the party was able to escape unharmed.
