Hollywood's Human Shadows Make Jobs Easier for Stars

A composite picture of some familiar and unfamiliar people in the movie world, taken at a studio recently. These photographs were taken by flash, a camera that never shows the outlines of the faces, but rather the natural expression of the sitter.

Some of the people in the pictures are well-known stars, while others are not so well-known. It is interesting to note how the flash camera brings out the true character of the sitter, and how the outlines are completely eliminated.

The flash camera is gaining in popularity among photographers, and is fast becoming a standard equipment for all who work on the motion picture industry.
