

THE FLYING COLONEL—THEN AND NOW

At the top of page—"Slim" Lindbergh, little known airmail pilot, in the cockpit of "The Spirit of St. Louis" shortly before he took off for the first New York-Paris solo flight, May 20, 1927. Below—Colonel and Mrs. Charles Augustus Lindbergh about to start on one of their recent long distance air voyages, in which America's most distinguished flyer acts as pilot while his no less famous wife spells him at the controls and maintains radio communication with the earth.
