

SHIPWRECK PERILS CREW OF 29

Nov. 8, 1931—The steamer Munleon, which went on the rocks during a dense fog near Point Reyes, Cal., is seen pounding itself to pieces. En route from San Francisco to Portland, Ore., the craft was laden with a cargo of lumber and combustibles. The crew was forced to take to the lifeboats late on the night of the wreck.

(Acme photo.)