GREAT MEN DON'T TALK ABOUT THEMSELVES... By HERBERT KAUFMAN

A great position is a magnifying glass upon a little nature. When you were observing the world at large couldn't learn how small you were, but when you rose above the crowd we instantly perceived your shortcomings.

Your self-satisfaction stamps you as a paragon.

If you were accustomed to recognition
you wouldn't insist on it.

Your constant reference to your status proclamis that few are aware of it and suggests that you have but recently "arrived."

Important people are so occupied with their responsibilities that they haven't time for paltry vanities.

The famous do not personally advertise—their admirers perform that function for them.

If your ability were genuine it would be ingenuous. The first essential to power and force is a contempt of trifles. Hunger for cheap adulation is the indubitable mark of a petty soul.

You evident delight with your rank infers that you have just attained it.

So long as you persist in explaining who you are you'll remind us of what you used to be.

Let your work talk. Your tongue can't take its place.

You furnish the deeds and we'll supply the approbation.

If you're really competent you'll soon drop your pomposity and subside into a well-mannered, considerate gentleman.

Products of the Minds of Ingenuity.

By MECHANICIAN.

A new invention which has been reported in some place where, when inserted in the lock of a door, the instrument can be made to turn in either direction with equal facility. It is thus more effectual in preventing thieves from entering a house without a key, and on the contrary, it's more portable in case of being robbed, since the thief can't make.

By HERBERT KAUFMAN.

F. C. Miller.

Those who have the most can most afford to be unobtrusive. They know that their achievements so ouploom their person-salities that there is no need to adopt identification marks.

The field marshal doesn't wear his dress uniform in action.

Kings do not take their private walks in gold lace and ermine.

The actor invariably accentsuates his characteriization.

The imitation great man over-emphasizes his impersonation.

Popularity can't begin at home. The mirror is an inaccurate judge of merit.

Until you learn to forget self, humanity won't yearn to remember you.

Fame immortalizes only those who think for others. History pays no compliments to the selfish.

While you listen to the voice of vanity, you'll strain in vain for the applause of humanity.

It is our privilege to recognize genius—not your prerogative to assume it.

A beast of the fields once masqueraded in the robes of the king of the forest. At a distance the deception was effective.

But, not content with his superficial success, he insisted upon roaring for the respect due the lion. Whereupon his hearers broke into derisive laughter, reminding one to another
"if he hadn't brayed we wouldn't have known he was an ass.

SIDELIGHTS ON SCIENCE AND SCIENTISTS.

By Shubal Vail Clevenger, M.D.

How to Make a Toy Doll.

Some controversy exists as to whether this toy was invented by women or men as toys are not needed, as was supposed in earlier days.

Doll's head, chest, arms and legs are cut from cardboard in the shape of the proper parts. Pieces are then assembled and pasted together with the aid of a strong paste or glue. The doll must be made as large as possible, as it will be used in acting a play. Any character can be utilized as long as the parts are made to fit correctly.

The toy doll can be improved by the addition of a number of accessories, such as a dress, hat and shoes. These items can be purchased at a dime store or made by the individual.

The toy doll can be used in various ways, such as acting out a play, drawing a picture, or playing a game. It is an excellent way to encourage children to be creative and imaginative.

MARCH-APRIL

THE TRIBUNE WEEKLY ALMANACK

On the Wing.

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

While the winged creature is small in size, its movements are so swift that human beings can't help but be impressed by its grace and agility. Birds are among the most fascinating creatures on earth, and their beauty and versatility are always appreciated.

Many people are fascinated by birds, and the interest in bird watching and bird study is growing yearly. The study of birds has been popularized through the publication of bird guides, nature walks, and bird watching clubs.

Bird watching is a great way to connect with nature and to appreciate the beauty of the world around us. It's also a great way to learn about the ecosystem and the importance of conservation.

Birds are an integral part of the world and
their presence is essential for the health of our planet. By understanding the role of birds and their importance in the ecosystem, we can take steps to protect them and their habitats.

Bird watching is a great way to connect with
nature and to appreciate the beauty of the world around us. It's also a great way to learn about the ecosystem and the importance of conservation.

Birds are an integral part of the world and
their presence is essential for the health of our planet. By understanding the role of birds and their importance in the ecosystem, we can take steps to protect them and their habitats.

Relief for Agonizing Backache

No need, friend, to suffer from the frightful pain of a sick back, necks, headaches, rheumatism or arthritis. Just get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment, and it is as good as a doctor. It is applied to a small amount of oil and is poured into the back. It is then rubbed into the affected region. The pain is relieved in a few minutes and the suffering is gone.