

METROPOLITAN MAYTIME: SIGHTS OF THE SPRING IN CHICAGOLAND

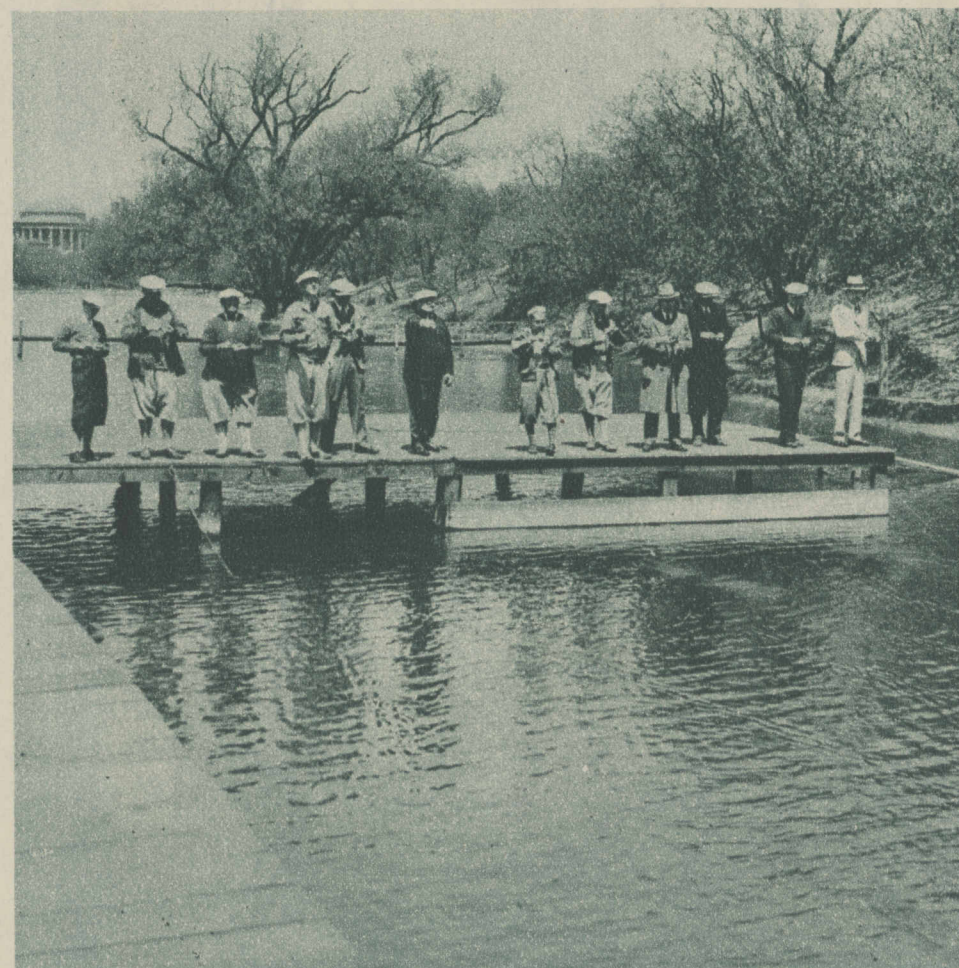

A LAKE MICHIGAN JOY FOR JUBILEE VISITORS—Three fast speedboats leave foaming wakes as they tear through the sparkling waters of Chicago's front yard, with one of the world's most famous skylines in the background.

(Tribune photo, by Edward McGill.)

AN AFTERNOON AT THE RACES—Chicago turf fans take a half-holiday off these fine spring days, take a train to Aurora to see the horses run, and, perhaps, make trifling investments in improvement of thoroughbred breed. At the left, a typical crowd of spectators at the Aurora track, where Chicago's spring and summer season of racing was inaugurated. At the right, the talented hoofs of a fast field flash down the home stretch in a thrilling finish.

(Tribune photos, by Swain Scalf.)

THE ANGLERS TEST THEIR ART—Followers of Izaak Walton, preparing to catch bigger and better fish this summer if skill has anything to do with it, polish up their technique at a lagoon in Lincoln park.

(Tribune photo.)

THE VISITING GOLFER could fight it out along this line all summer, playing one course a day, without exhausting Chicagoland's array of splendid courses. This foursome attempts to retrieve a ball that dived to the bottom of a water hazard in Marquette park.

THE ROLLER SKATE comes into its own as school children race in Grant park. In the background, the Shedd aquarium.

(Tribune photo, by Louis Paus.)