Germany—Nation of Mystery

Page Three

Traveler Is Baffled by His Impressions on Visit

The accompanying letter is the second of two which were presented in this section last Sunday. Since it is necessary to protect overvalued readers, the name of the writer cannot be disclosed.

Paris, France.

Germans have definite impressions of the West, but oddly, I cannot be sure that my impressions are real or new. I have seen and heard a lot, and I am not familiar with all the facts of the region.

The Greater Germany is mysterious. It is not natural. It is a military empire at the bottom of the world. It is the land of the Germans, but it is also a land of the French, the English, the Swiss, and many others. The Germans are trying to conquer the world, and it is not easy for us to understand them.

At the palaces of Potsdam, to the left of the German government, the author of this letter, who is a German, said, "This is just like being on a voyage to a foreign country." These palaces are large, and they are surrounded by a high wall.

"Czecho-Slovakia," said the author, "is the land of the Germans. It is not frequented by foreigners unless they are invited, and they are not invited if they are not natural. It is a military empire, and it is not easy to understand it.

But Germany is not a military empire. It is a country that is trying to conquer the world. It is not natural. It is a military empire at the bottom of the world.

Germany is mysterious. It is not natural. It is a military empire at the bottom of the world. It is the land of the Germans, but it is also a land of the French, the English, the Swiss, and many others. The Germans are trying to conquer the world, and it is not easy for us to understand them.

In a country where the government is not natural, it is not easy to understand it. The government is not natural. It is a military empire, and it is not easy to understand it.

In Germany, the government is not natural. It is a military empire, and it is not easy to understand it.

Germany is mysterious. It is not natural. It is a military empire at the bottom of the world. It is the land of the Germans, but it is also a land of the French, the English, the Swiss, and many others. The Germans are trying to conquer the world, and it is not easy for us to understand them.

In a country where the government is not natural, it is not easy to understand it. The government is not natural. It is a military empire, and it is not easy to understand it.

In Germany, the government is not natural. It is a military empire, and it is not easy to understand it.