PASSENGER LIST By Olga L. Rosmnith

(Copyright: 1938: By the Chicago Tribune-New York News Syndicate.)

On board the S. S. Panama Queen, sailing from Los Angeles to New York, via Panama are Anne Sydney, who has a part in a Broadway play, and her crippled and embittered sister, Mena: Arnold Vernon, rich English motion picture producer, and his coldly beautiful wife, Claire; Isobel Butler, who has a stateroom next to the Vernon suite and hope to set in pictures through him; Alex Reed, young surgeon returning to work after two years' illness, and gossipy Mrs. Panting. Isobel meets and arouses Vernon's interest. She plans to fiirt with Alex to allay suspicion. Anne and Alex are mutually attracted. Mena solitefully tells Alex that Anne is a heartless fiirt. Pride causes Anne to hold herself alood from him. Alex's friend, Dr. Neil Andrews, is to join the ship at Acapulco, Mexico.

INSTALMENT XIII.

A NEW PASSENGER.

Mena's enthusiasm for exploration had evaporated by the time they reached the poverty stricken cathedral. She had been horrified by the flies buzzing over the exposed food and the dirt underfoot and the rotten smells in the market. The picturesqueness of the place was lost upon her. "Do you want to see anything more?" she asked plaintively.

Anne did. She was not blind to the primitive conditions of Acapulco nor the poverty of the inhabitants, but she saw a beauty in it and in the brown Mexican faces with their peculiar stamp of antique nobility. She said: " want to wander around and take photographs. The place is full of pictures. Shall I first take you back to the ship?"

Mena sat down on a worn wooden bench. "No. Come back for me. I'll Anne went out into the hot afternoon again and pulled down the wide brim of her hat the better to shade her face. She turned to the narrow rough street to the right of the cathedral and began to climb the hill. It led her away from the tiny town up a steep street flanked by hovels almost buried in lush green gardens.

She took some pictures and went on climbing. Now she could see the white ship lying at anchor like a toy in the island locked bay far below her. She focussed her camera on the distant ship.

Two small children emerged from a garden and stood beside her, their great brown eyes wide with wonder. Anne saw them and exclaimed at their velvet skinned beauty. "Stand there," she said, pointing. "Please-stand

They understood her gestures and obeyed her, watching her shyly. She put out her hand to move one of them closer to the other against the nar-row vine creepered mud wall. A voice shouted behind her: "No—no—stop! Christianity and Mohammedanism for the religious control of 19 million na-Don't touch! " The man came running down the steep lane. "Pardon me," he said, Chicago last night when the Rev.

"but you're off the ship, aren't you? Well, it isn't safe to touch these kids. Jonathan Udo Ekong, member of a This quarter is riddled with disease." He was a big man, sunburned and blond, handsome in his immaculate white suit. "Thank you," she said. "I should have thought of it myself if I'd had any sense." She threw a handful of pennies to the children. The stranger fell into step beside her as she began to walk down the hill. "I'm joining the ship, ference of Lutheran synods, which too, so we might as well get acquainted. My name's Neil Andrews. Will raised the coal black African to full you tell me yours? "Why, you're Dr. Reed's friend," said Anne impulsively. "He came off Luke's Missouri Synod Lutheran to meet you. He'll be down there waiting for you." church, Belmont and Greenview ave"So he told you about me, did he?" Andrews smiled, showing big, nues. The ceremony was announced square white teeth. Everything about him was strong and big. He looked at Anne, a quick measuring look. A peach of a girl. Warmer than beautiful, much more than pretty. An original, distinguished looking girl with a voice that melted into the ears. Fun in those gleaming, dark golden eyes, too. He halted suddenly and said: "Give me your camera. Stand over there and I'll take a picture-

Anne hesitated-surprised. He added: "Surely you want yourself taken in foreign parts to send home? Stand there and I'll get the bay below, the ship and the islands for a background."

Wonder how long before she'll let me touch it. She took the camera, laughing. "Want me to take one of you?" He didn't, but he said he did. It delayed the descent into the town. By find denominational leadership best the time he left her at the cathedral where she explained she must pick up suited to his peoples' needs. After her sister, he felt he had made an impression. Mena was in the cathedral, but she had not remained there. On the bench beside her was a collection of small parcels showing she had been shopping. "Where have you been all these hours, Anne? Leaving me here alone. You've had time to go to Mexico City." 'You can't climb that hill and take pictures in five minutes, Mena." "You've been gone more than an hour. You picked up a man. I saw you coming down the street with him."

Anne waited till they were outside the cathedral. "You've got to stop this, Mena, or I'll get a stateroom to myself and not speak to you again the rest of the voyage.

Anne willed furiously for the tears to retreat from her eyes. But they did fall later when she stood alone in the dusk leaning over the rail, watching the ship move slowly and carefully out from the embrace of the dark, mysterious little islands. All the passengers were sitting at dinner. Alex was dining in Neil Andrews' suite de luxe that paired with the Vernons' suite at the other side of deck B. He looked thin and fine drawn in comparison with Neil's sturdy bulk, but his friend was genuinely amazed by his look of glowing health. 'You look fit for anything, Alex. Better than I've ever seen you."

"Yes-thanks to you."

"We won't talk about that part of it."

Certainly we will. able to repay you."

Neil put down his glass and stared at Alex across the dinner table. "Didn't I tell you that I never lend money? I thought you'd got that June with a degree of bachelor of Balaban & Katz Perfectly Cool Theaters straight. I don't like lending. Lend-and lose a friend. I've found it too science in sociology. He also studied damn true. That was a gift—and I never got more pleasure out of giving." at Immanuel Lutheran college in the Alex's mouth showed his unalterable decision. "I wouldn't have accepted your help on such terms. You lose your friends through lending because they can't or don't want to pay you back. I can-and I do. And even when I have, I'll be forever in your debt. Please try and see my point of view about this." "What about trying to see mine?"

"I see it very well. You're fine-sometimes careless generosity, but how would you like to give-and lose a friend?" Neil got up from the table carrying his coffee cup with him and sat on the divan stretching out his long legs. "All right, you win. How's the girl situation on the Panama Queen?"

"Still the same Neil. Well, there's an excellent choice from village intellect to Hollywood fluff and any color you happen to fancy? "Fine! That suits me. But I'm not the same Neil. I mean so far as the girl business goes. I'm looking for a wife." He saw the faint smile that moved Alex's mouth. "Sure, Alex-I mean it. I need something to round out my roving life, Feminine companionship. I'm sick of traveling alone.'

"And you figure on finding a wife on a ship's cruise? "Why not-it she happens to be on board? The right woman might turn up anywhere. For instance, I got quite a kick at the heart with a girl I picked up in Acapulco this afternoon.

"A good thing you were just sailing." "But so was she. She happens to be a passenger on the ship. And one Alex laughed. "I know who she is, of course. A redhead called Isobel

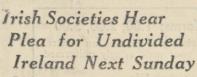

"Her hair was a kind of red, though not quite. But she said her name was Anne Sydney." Neil saw the swift change—the perplexed surprise in Alex's face. "Say, you haven't pegged a claim out there yourself, have you?" "No, I haven't. But I know a little about her. She's no use to you if it's a wife you're after. The girl's an actress-a real one. Already married to the theater."

"So what? Her heart still ticks, doesn't it? Besides, I prefer girls with something to 'em. I don't think I shall bother looking any further." [Continued tomorrow.]

"Centennial Block" is a combination pieced and appliquéd design adapted from an old piece of printed material belonging to one of our readers, Mrs. William S. Giles. The Liberty Bell is of deep blue against a pale blue background. The corner blocks are red with white appliqued figures. The three inch white bands have red stars and one-half inch red bands appliquéd before they are joined to the center square. The combination block is set together in an alternate arrangement with plain white blocks, and finished with an eight inch pale blue border bound with a one-half inch white bias bind-

Ordain African Chieftains' Kin Into Ministry

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS. A sector of the struggle between tives of Nigeria, Africa, reached into line of Ibibo chieftains, was ordained to the Lutheran ministry.

The impressive rites, conducted under the name of the synodical conministerial dignity, were held at St. to be the last of its kind ever to be held in America. Hereafter the synodical conference will train all of its colored leaders for Africa on that conti-

The newly created African minister spoke briefly.

The Ibibo tribe, according to Pastor Ekong, includes two million of the nineteen million native Nigerians. Christianity was first introduced to the Ibibo by a nondenominational sions group of Belfast, Ireland. His father, Udo Ekong, was killed by his pagan tribe for giving land for the erection of a church.

Pastor Ekong said the Ibibos, like the rest of Nigeria, struggle between Christianity and Mohammedanism. Of the nineteen million Nigerians, more than eleven million, he said, are pagans, more than seven million are Mohammedans, and slightly more than one million are Christians.

Pastor Ekong was graduated from North Carolina Agricultural and Technical college, Greensboro, last
