I devised and deceived

By Louis Borsch and Fielding James

(Madonna press - 1957 - Chicago Daily Tribune, Inc.)

"I Devise and Deceive" by Louis Borsch and Fielding James, from "The Chicago Daily Tribune" on Tuesday, July 6, 1937. The text is a historical piece, possibly a play or a story, discussing various aspects of life and society. The article covers themes such as dates and engagements, friendships, and the influence of personal experiences on one's daily life. The text also touches on the role of women in society, particularly in terms of their engagement and marriage decisions. The article seems to delve into the complexities of relationships and the challenges individuals face in maintaining personal integrity while navigating through social expectations.

In summary, "I Devise and Deceive" by Louis Borsch and Fielding James is a richly detailed piece that explores various facets of life, relationships, and social dynamics, offering insights into the personal and societal experiences of the time.