ATHLEFE FOR STRIKES

when hot

pavements

make your feet

steam in perspiration

WHEN THE MERCURY SOARS, you walk on pavements that are up to 34 degrees hotter than the air you breathe—according to government tests! Your feet literally soak and steam in a welter of irritating perspiration. They get tender and sore—especially between the toes where the skin may actually crack open—inviting a painful case of infectious Athlete's Foot!

CRACKED Skin between the toes warns of DANGER

THE PARASITIC Athlete's Foot fungi actually feed on the dead skin and stale moisture—breeding in the folds of skin between the toes. When the skin cracks open, they get inside and spread unseen beneath the skin. The toes redden and itch. The skin peels off in moist, white patches. It's the dread Athlete's Foot you've got!

Tonight, examine the skin between the toes carefully. Don't take chances with unpleasant Athlete's Foot! At the very first sign of a crack, drench your toes thoroughly with Absorbine Jr., full strength.
