Hair Brush Stages a Comeback

Life and Luster Restored by Scalp Stimulation

By ELEANOR NANGLE

Dandruff and dryness are the two universal hair evils. For the last twenty-five years women have combated these with the use of scalp powders. Yet, until recently, the treatment for these conditions was not very effective. But, in recent years, there has been a change in the treatment of these problems, and now, there are several new and effective ways to combat these hair evils.

A treatment that combats both dandruff and dryness is illustrated on this page. This treatment, we find, is based on the three "eternal verities" of hair care—cleanliness, scalp stimulation, and brushing. It is a long treatment, and an individualized one. The scalp is left entirely free of soapsuds and hair of any kind. The hair itself is luminescent to radiate better.

The first step of the treatment is the application of a stimulating tonic, applied directly to the scalp and the hair shaft, to stimulate and to loosen the dandruff particles. Following this, the scalp is lightly and firmly massaged, and the hair is brushed. The second step is the application of the filling ritual with compressed air, which lifts and carries away the scalp surface and is further assurance of freedom from dandruff. The final touch is the application of an oil for either dry, or oily, or normal hair. The hair may then be set into a wave, and will remain as a treatment such as this is fortified against the overnight in the scalp surface. If the treatment is not well maintained, dandruff will return.

3 The first brushing, after the massage, pulls the hair up and away from the scalp, leaving it fully and full of life. A rolling motion is used on the scalp to loosen dandruff.

2 Vigorous and lengthy scalp massage brings up the circulation. The entire scalp is given the benefit of all the massage, which tones the hair back to health, and the head to its former beauty.

The dry shampoo is given with a mixture of dry shampoo powder and a moist—here, camomile, or spirit—moist—spray—all oil and grime. The mixture remains in the hair for several minutes.

The final step is the application of an oil, chosen for its suitability to the individual condition, which might be dry, normal, or oily. Ointment is applied to the scalp and hair shafts.
