ROYAL MARRIAGE IN LONDON TODAY

Wedding of Prince Arthur of Connaught and Duchess of Fife Due at Noon.

SERVICE TO BE SIMPLE.

Brides of Europe to Attend Ceremony; Archbishops Will officiate.

Admiration, Sir, is the obvious deduction for a most eventful day for the Duke of Connaught and Princess Mary, whose marriage yesterday has added another romantic pastime to the already crowded Calendar of the Year. For Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Princess Mary of Teck, who are to be married at St. James's Palace today, there is no audience of the Royal Family, but by a royal decree he has been given the right to be married as a family affair. The ceremony will begin at noon and will last not longer than an hour. The Archbishops of Canterbury and York, Sir John A. Maclean, and Sir John A. Maclean, will officiate. The ceremony will be simple, and the most prominent witnesses to the marriage service will be the Duke and Duchess of Teck, the crown prince and princess of Sweden, and the King of the Belgians, who are expected to arrive at St. James's Palace before 1 o'clock. Prince Charles and Prince Albert, brothers of the bride, will also be present. The Duke of Connaught, who is a Roman Catholic, has been married by the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Princess of Teck, who is a Protestant, by the Archbishop of York. The marriage service will be conducted in English and French, and a short address will be made by the King of the Belgians. The wedding will be a family affair, and the Duke and Duchess of Teck, the King of the Belgians, and the crown prince and princess of Sweden, will be the only witnesses. The Duke of Connaught will be married in the presence of the Royal Family, and the Princess of Teck will be married in the presence of the Duke of Connaught and the Prince of Wales. The wedding will be a simple one, and the Duke and Duchess of Teck, the King of the Belgians, and the crown prince and princess of Sweden, will be the only witnesses. The Duke of Connaught will be married in the presence of the Royal Family, and the Princess of Teck will be married in the presence of the Duke of Connaught and the Prince of Wales.
