

Her family and her friends warned her against the man she loved...

She found out they were right... too late!... Shelia Fay married "the wild boy of Harvard" in spite of her family's opposition.

What happens when she discovers the awful truth about her husband is told in the brilliant new Daily Tribune serial—

"SNOW"

By EDNAH AIKEN

A gripping tale of a woman's struggle for the man she loves... in the heart of an Alaskan wilderness.

Beginning in Tomorrow's Tribune

A man fights to regain his honor as a man during a long, bitter Alaskan winter...

A woman, accustomed to gay society life, helps him carry on the battle with supreme courage...

And when spring comes to the canyon miraculous changes are wrought.

YOU'LL thrill to the drama of this great story laid in a country of adventure—brimming with tense situations.

Don't fail to read

"SNOW"

Beginning in the Chicago Tribune
T O M O R R O W

"It can't be true," Shelia moaned. She couldn't—she wouldn't believe it! And yet... it was her husband talking.

EDNAH AIKEN, author of the fascinating new Chicago Tribune serial, has written several successful novels, including "The River" and "The Hate Breeders." In "SNOW" Mrs. Aiken has surpassed her former efforts, giving Tribune readers a brilliant and intensely interesting new serial story.

ES. JOHNSTON