A STAR Gazer Who Found 4 COMETS

Gratuated at the National Physical Laboratory in England, William Proctor, England, is a keen amateur astronomer and is no longer wedded to the traditional way of looking at the heavens. He has a small observatory at his home, which he has converted into an observatory for his own use. The observatory is furnished with a large telescope, and he spends many hours observing the heavens. The observatory is also equipped with a small library of astronomy books, and he keeps abreast of the latest developments in the field.

Puzzle: How Did She Get There?

The Stars of November

Melbourne Police Rookies on Parade

Following Their Fathers' Footsteps

A Two-Headed Golf Club

Stomach Pains? Dangerous Worms Cause Stomach Troubles

Advertisement