MISS H. P. LOGANSPORT, IND.

The outlines and features of this face reveal traits associated with wholesome youth and innate intelligence. Miss P. is sociable, good natured, and whole hearted in everything. Her mental equipment is excellent. She has a facile mind, and is acquisitive of knowledge.

MISS D. W. CALUMET CITY, ILL.

The characteristics revealed in this face are strictly feminine. Miss W. is not aggressive, but she has the qualities of patience, sympathy, understanding and gentleness. She has intuition and a warm heart. Her success should be in the domestic field rather than that of business.

MISS W. R. IRONWOOD, MICH.

Miss R. is resourceful and firm beneath a mild exterior. She has shrewdness, quick wit and surprising tenacity. She is discreet and diplomatic, and has excellent taste. She would be competent in almost any situation.

MISS M. G. SHEBOYGAN, WIS.

Miss G. has an excellent mind, combining quick wits with accuracy, but her aggressiveness is rather faulty. She has organizing ability, but not quite enough initiative.

MISS D. D. WABASH, IND.

Miss D. is an entirely adequate person; she is intelligent, capable, sensible, and tolerant. She is not distant, but her reserve is sometimes misunderstood. The size and proportions of her features show clearly her well balanced character and her generosity.

MISS E. L. JACKSON, MICH.

Clear headedness, practicality, and diligence are Miss L.'s most prominent traits. She should be an excellent business woman, despite a tendency to be overcautious. A little more enterprise and self-reliance would supplement her qualities most successfully.

MISS A. S. GENEVA, WIS.

Artistic appreciation and talent are marked in this face, together with a common sense and practicality rather foreign to that temperament. Miss S. is intelligent, industrious, and has fixed aims. Her mouth shows an enviable generosity and balance of character.

MISS M. W. CENTRALIA, ILL.

Miss W.'s face reveals an interesting personality. The lower part indicates a sweet, rather yielding disposition, an affectionate nature and a sympathy and understanding that is endearing—while her eyes and straight brows reveal keen intelligence and persistence.

MISS W. O. CLINTON, IOWA.

Miss O.'s most marked characteristic is a tranquillity obtained by intelligent perspective and good judgment. She has composure and powers of persuasion. Her loyalty and understanding would make her friends rely on her for a great deal.

MISS T. D. WATERLOO, IA.

Miss D. is a progressive person, with a great deal of energy. She is reliably perceptive and practical. She is warm hearted, generous, and uncritical of others, and has a good sense of humor.
