

As we see it editorially

Labor Day is for ALL workers

There's a bad misconception out there in the American marketplace, and it's doing more harm than good. Unionized labor may have provided the original impetus to get "Labor Day" declared a national holiday -- but all people who labor should be appreciated in this holiday just passed.

America's overall work force is much of what makes this nation great. Men and women from all walks of life -- working in all fields of endeavor -- are truly the strength and breath of this country.

Their industry enriches our economy, giving us growth and brightening our futures. And we all have cause to be proud. That's ALL workers, and those of us who appreciate the efforts of workers.

Labor Day

For without those who work, toil, expend energy, talent, time and skills, there would be no Labor Day. And no America, either!

Letters from our readers

Keep telling of fire safety!

DEAR EDITOR: Read with interest your front page story last week. It is remarkable a four year old like Josh can have that much presence of mind -- many a good year older wouldn't have.

Reading about his having been taught what to do in case of fire, "to stop, drop and roll," reminded me of an article I read earlier this year in the Ladies Home Journal about fire and burns. Thought then it was something that should be stressed, and reading about Josh brought it to mind again. I decided NOW is the time to speak out and perhaps add a new dimension to that rule.

This is something I know from experience. Had I read this before my accident I may have been spared a lot of pain. To roll is fine -- but, and a BIG BUT -- the flames and fire have a tendency to go to your face and head. This happened to me as I tried rolling on the floor, as wrapping a throw rug

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mildred (Woelke) Leithart of Columbus, Ohio attended the recent Woelke Reunion and submitted this essay in praise of the Pigeon community, written by a cousin Paul Woelke of Westou, Ohio. It is reprinted here for the enjoyment of Progress-Advance readers.

Ode to Pigeon, Michigan

When I was a little boy I remember Dad and Mom talking about a place faraway. It wasn't New York City, Chicago or California. It was always Pigeon, Michigan, where Uncle Otto and Aunt Christine and my cousins lived.

Then one summer after the corn was hoed and cultivated for the last time, and the wheat and oats were threshed, it was decided to make the trip to Pigeon before school began.

I was maybe five or six years old, and we had a Model T Ford. Most of the roads were mud or gravel and 15 miles per hour was top speed if you wanted to stay on the seat.

Dad asked Emil Eilert to act as co-pilot and navigator on the trip. Emil was about 18 and had been driving almost 10 years and knew how to change tires, etc.

Most of the roads weren't marked, and unmapped, but Uncle Otto had written some instructions on a piece of yellow tablet paper and we were off a great adventure.

Since it was almost a sin for a farmer to take a day off or to eat in a restaurant, Mom had packed a picnic basket with lots of food.

I remember we got caught in the crowd going to the Michigan State Fair in Detroit. It was stop-and-go driving for quite awhile.

That night we arrived in Pigeon, Michigan, and some of us men slept in a cottage on Crescent Beach, owned by a Mr. Depker. I think.

We took the back seat out of the car and I slept on that. We had a wonderful time in Pigeon, Michigan.

A few years ago I was President of the Wood County Pork Producers and one of the fringe benefits was a trip to a seminar in Washington D.C.

While there I shook hands with John Bloek, secretary of agriculture in President Reagan's Cabinet.

One day while going up the elevator, we were introducing each other and one fellow in the back of the elevator said, "Do you know anyone in Pigeon, Michigan?"

I said, "Sure I do," and he said that he took a load of bales to Art Woelke for his sheep the day before. We talked a bit and that night we had a banquet for our senators and congressmen at the Longworth Building. I looked up Art's friend and we talked, not about the 15 countries I've visited, but about a place called, Pigeon, Michigan.

It's good to be back!

DEAR EDITOR, Last week I wrote that I was at Grindstone City, but I didn't mention that I also visited the museum at Huron City. I got there for the last conducted tour, to see the town. I saw Adolph Schuette there, but he went on a different tour. I didn't know anybody in my group, but some people knew me. I go there once every year -- and see something different every time. I like to see that log cabin where they raised more than 10 children. But back in those days, the oldest children were always gone from home before the last ones were around. Girls used to get married quite young and boys used to work out. Money was saved and if a neighbor needed a hired man and asked your Dad if he could have you to work for him, and your Dad thought he could spare you, you just went and no questions were asked.

The same was true for hired girls. I still can remember when women used to brag how they put their hired girls to work in the garden or loaned them to the neighbors. And some men went uptown and sat in the stores or shops and bragged about what they made their hired men do. In one of the Huron City rooms, they have a cook stove like the people had back when I was young. My Mother had one of them and she did a lot of different things with it. She used to take several lids off and put a griddle on to make pancakes (which were always very good.) Or, she'd fry corn mush which was also very good, with beef gravy. Then, she used to bake the best bread and pie. There was a reservoir on the one end where warm water was kept and there was a warming closet on top, where Mother kept food warm for anybody who was late for dinner. Then, there was always a kettle of hot water on the stove. If you had wet or cold feet, you used to open the oven door and put your feet in the oven. And when you took your bath, you did it in front of the open oven door. They used to burn anything that would burn in the stove. You used to burn some coal and wood, and if you were living on the farm and had pigs, you used to burn corn cobs. That was the boys' job, to keep the cob box full, or to carry in wood from the wood pile or wood shed -- where you were taken if you didn't behave yourself! They also had a lot of old dishes, knives, spoons and other things. Everybody had a coffee grinder. They also had a small school room at Huron City, and desks like we used to have. And in the store, they have a lot of old stuff that was quite common when I was a boy -- even an old pot-bellied stove, where men used to sit and chew tobacco, play checkers and shoot the breeze. In 1 Samuel 8:13, it says, "He will take your daughters to be confectionaries and to be cooks and to be bakers." Well, I don't know how good cooks some of these young women are today, but I knew my wife was a very good cook. And in the last few weeks when my Daughters were here, and my Daughters-in-law and my grandchildren, we had some very good meals!

Thumb OUTDOORS

Huron County will take part in an early season for local giant Canada geese, but most of the "hotspots" will be closed to hunting. The 6-day season gets underway on Wednesday, September 3, and will close on Monday, September 8. During the short season, the daily limit will be 2 Canadas, and 4 in possession. The shooting hours will be one-half hour before sunrise to sunset, local time. The closed area in Huron County will be all the area west of the Caseville-Owendale Road, and in Tuscola, north of M-25. The area also includes the water and islands of Saginaw Bay.

Even though hunting season is just around the corner, fall fishing in the Thumb area continues to be hot and heavy. Excellent walleye catches were reported at Grindstone City and also at Charity Island. While Cleos were the hot bait at Grindstone, Hot 'N' Toits, Erie Dearies and Mepps Spinners were mostly in use at the Islands. King salmon were very active at Harbor Beach. 20- to 25-pound kings were being hit at Harbor and Northport Nailers in 30 foot depths outside the harbor. An occasional coho was being boated, and these fish were ranging in the 20-pound class.

Don't forget, the deadline for Hunter's Choice deer licenses is September 24. After that date, hunters may purchase their second deer license for either the archery or firearm deer seasons. The second license is only good for bucks, but armed with more than one, the hunter can fill early for the freezer, and then look for the trophy.

If you are a pheasant hunter, it would behoove you to check on this year's regulations. A large portion of Huron County will be closed to hunting due to the planting of the Sichuan-Hybrid pheasants.

WOODS and WATERS

By Duane Guenther

A look at the bush

Up until last month, my forages into the wilderness had been limited to short jaunts throughout the state and federal forests of Michigan, with an occasional trip to lower Canada, and the Colorado, Wyoming, Montana area thrown in. But recently all that has changed. During the month of August, I was fortunate enough to get a look at some real wilderness, or "bush" as the locals refer to it, and I have returned home with a new appreciation for words like, "vastness", "deep interior", or "just over the hill".

The experience really began when I disembarked from a DC-10 at the Anchorage International Airport and while tossing my rod cases and duffle bags into the trunk of a waiting taxi, observed a mud-spattered, pickup bearing a bumper sticker which read, "After You Have Seen Alaska - Everything Else Looks Like Texas". This slogan, although meant to be a malicious pun aimed at a state noted for its bragging, does a good job of illustrating the size of our 49th state. And, with an area of about 500,000 square miles and only some 600,000 people, most of whom live in Anchorage and Fairbanks, you end up with a lot of empty country.

I began to realize the desolation of Alaska when the Cessna 206 in which I was riding crossed the mud flats of Cook's Inlet and began to follow its Loran bearing toward an isolated gold mining camp nestled deep in the foothills of the Alaskan Range. The plane, piloted by a native Alaskan, had picked us up at a small terminal next to Anchorage International, and after loading up with gas at a self-serve airplane gas station, was about to ferry us to a fishing camp where we would spend 10 exciting days in the Alaskan Bush.

We had been in the air less than 10 minutes when Russ, our pilot, tipped the wings to the left and pointed out a cow moose surrounded by a couple of gangly calves. Although I was interested in the wildlife, at that moment I was more interested in the absence of civilization. In the short time we had been in the air, we left behind all traces of houses, roads, powerlines, or any other evidence of human habitation. Below us, stretching for as far as the eye could see, was vegetation punctuated by water, and water punctuated by vegetation, and it would be that way for the next 200 miles.

Alaska is a land of tundra. Various forms of grasses sprout up to form hummocks, or humps of vegetation causing foot travel across the land to be unbearable, if not impossible. Sparsely scattered throughout the tundra are impenetrable clumps of stunted willows and alders along with an occasional spruce. The blandness of the countryside is sparkled by the profusely growing fireweed, whose red and violet colors dominate the green background. Around, through, and beneath all of the vegetation lies an insurmountable amount of water, making the rubber-knee, or hip boot the most valuable possession an Alaskan can own, especially in the summer.

The trip to the camp was an endless expanse of sameness. An occasional river broke up the monotony of the landscape, but for the most part it was grass, willow, alder, spruce, fireweed, and water. The rivers we crossed were wide, meandering bodies of water with numerous channels that twisted and turned like the braids in a school girl's hair. The creeks, we would call them rivers in Michigan, were more tumultuous in nature. Narrow, and fast-moving, they cartwheeled over boulders and careened around bends, tugging and scouring at the banks in a valiant effort to reduce the landscape to a flat plain.

Our plane trip soon brought us to the high plateau bordering the foothills of Denali National Park. We would stay on the southeast boundary, away from the tour buses and other clamors of civilization. Ours would be an isolated camp, protected on the south and east by the uninhabited tundra we had just flown over, and on the north and west by the formidable peaks of the Alaskan Range.

The left wing of the plane dipped toward the horizon, and out of the plexiglass window I viewed a small dirt landing strip bordered by a plywood shack and 2 log cabins.

"Camp Creek?" I questioned our pilot. He nodded, pulled back on the handle controlling the flaps, and the small plane settled toward the ground.

Freezing best way to preserve goodness

By BARBARA NEUMAN
Extension Home Economist

Vegetable gardening is a popular American pastime. But all too often, gardens can mean too much of a good thing all at once. Perhaps it's time to consider preserving the food you grow. After all, how many zucchinis can your family eat each week?

If you are saying, "I don't have time to can and freeze," you may want to reconsider. Think about the high cost and often inferior quality of produce during the winter months!

Freezing is the most popular way to preserve food. It maintains the natural color, fresh flavor and nutrient value of fresh food. It is also fast and easy and requires little equipment other than a freezer. Frozen foods seldom spoil, though they are subject to loss from mechanical breakdown, power failure or improper preparation, such as poor wrapping or freezing without blanching.

Some vegetables such as green onions, hot peppers, beets, sweet peppers, cooked tomatoes, green tomatoes and vinegar style cole slaw can be frozen without blanching. This cuts the preparation time.

Select vegetables that are slightly immature. Then thoroughly wash the vegetables with water, drain and pat dry.

Prepare them by slicing or dicing -- a food processor can be a great timesaver -- or leave whole. Pack in freezer bags, releasing as much air as possible, and freeze in a single layer in the coldest part of the freezer.

Vegetables frozen this way should be used within three months and cooked by steaming or stir-frying.

All other vegetables need to be blanched before being frozen. Blanching is a vital step. It entails heating the vegetables in boiling water or steaming for a few minutes to stop the action of enzymes that would cause toughness and poor quality after one or two months of freezer storage. Recommended heating time varies with the type and size of vegetables.

Using boilable bags to blanch and freeze vegetables has become very popular. This allows you to process, freeze and cook, all in the same bag and produces the best tasting vegetables. Because the vegetables don't come into contact with water, they retain their color, texture and nutrients. Some vegetables, however, are not recommended for the boilable bag method. They include whole carrots, whole beets, broccoli, cauliflower, cabbage and turnips.

Prepare the vegetables as you wish and pack about four bags at a time. Drop them in to boiling water, cover and boil for twice the length of time suggested for conventional blanching. Remove the bags from the boiling water and place in ice water. When all the bags have reached the ice water stage, cool for another 10 minutes and freeze in a single layer.

If you are feeling even more adventurous, consider home canning. It really isn't as complicated as it seems at first. It does require advanced organization, some investment in equipment, time and care to avoid spoilage and possible food poisoning.

Instructions for canning are easy to find in most cookbooks, but make certain your information is current. Barbara Neuman, extension home economist, 104 County Building, Bad Axe, MI 48413, phone 269-9949 is a source for the most reliable, up-to-date canning and preserving information.

Michigan's State Champion Cake Bakers.....

For someone with a severe sweet tooth, it was the ultimate fantasy — tasting 200 cakes of all types! The event was the State Fair in Detroit, which continued through Labor Day.

I was a judge in the cakes division, reporting to the Community Arts Building at the fairgrounds 3 days before the fair opened. The cakes had all been delivered that morning. They were freshly-baked and deliciously-presented.

There were only 2 cake judges, I and a woman named Pat from the Detroit area. We had 2 assistants who provided us with the tools of our trade — paper plates, napkins, knives and pencils.

Tables displaying cakes were set up in a continuous line about half the length of the building, with an "L" at one end that continued out into the room. More tables continued down the other side of the room. We started gamely at one end and worked our way down the length of tables. Our assistants kept ahead of us, unwrapping cakes.

The cakes were already organized into judging categories. Each category was judged separately, with first, 2nd, 3rd, 4th prizes and honorable mentions. With 29 categories, we awarded lots of ribbons and lots of prize money ($2 to $8 for each ribbon). And weren't even judging the fancy decorated cakes; a different team eyed those.

These are the categories we judged: Applesauce, banana, carrot, Choco-Bake, chocolate, coconut, cocoa, fruit-flavor (orange, lemon, cherry, etc.), marble, ribbon, spice, white, yellow, miscellaneous frosted cakes, dark and light fruit cakes, chiffon, German chocolate, gingerbread, Lady Baltimore, poppyseed, pound, pumpkin, torte, Your Favorite Cake (another miscellaneous category), cakes baked in a microwave, and 4 unfrosted categories: angel food, roll cakes, sponge cakes and sunshine cakes.

At the beginning, we eagerly cut generous samples to taste. And we took 2nd tastes of those we were unsure of, until we arrived at our winners.

About halfway down the first bank of tables, my co-judge announced that she felt sick. We both cut down on the size of the samples. And we tried to savor them judiciously, so we could avoid seconds.

Soon we were leaving gobs of frosting on our paper plates, concentrating on the taste of the cake and a small bit of the frosting. And we were about three-fourths of the way through the cakes when we realized that if a cake was an obvious loser (overdone, fallen, or lumpy tough and dry) we really didn't need to taste it.

Some categories were very easy to judge; others were very difficult. The cakes in categories that drew only 2 or 3 entries didn't automatically get prizes; we judged each according to the standards for that type. The most difficult categories were Choco-Bake and My Favorite Cake.

Since the Nestle Company offered additional cash prizes ($100, $50 and $25) for that group, Choco-Bake was crowded with nearly 50 cakes. This took a lot of time and re-tasting.

And My Favorite Cake was a miscellaneous category with a vast array of diverse types of cakes. I'm still agonizing over the decisions we made.

Cake making is an elusive art. With so many variables of ingredients, mixing, baking and decorating, there are bound to be some failures along the way. Some entrants sent their cakes in a spirit of good will, even though the results were less than perfect. Others simply didn't bring a cake they had signed up to bring — and paid a $5 entry fee.

Even though many cakes were less than perfect, I found only one real failure. It was an apple cake that was rubbery and semi-liquid (probably overmixed and underdone). Three others were hardened and dried with age — and their tastes indicated they had been in a freezer for a long time. Two had sliding "accidents" in the car on the way to the fair.

A few other cakes couldn't be judged because they didn't meet the requirements for the class — unfrosted cakes in a frosted category.

Overall, I was very impressed with the high quality of the cakes entered in the State Fair. In a time when many people have given up (or never learned) the art of baking from "scratch," the people who baked these cakes showed a tremendous amount of skill and artistry.

Many of the frosted cakes had elaborate decorations and were presented with lots of flair.

After the judging, the cakes were cut. One perfect slice from each cake was wrapped and displayed for fair-goers to view through glass cases. The rest was cut and served to fair workers who gladly took a break from their work of setting things up.

My clothes haven't fit me quite the same since my cake-tasting experience, but the experience was worth it. I thoroughly enjoyed tasting the best of Michigan's cakes!

If you didn't make it to the fair, at Eight Mile and Woodward in Detroit, here are some recipes.

We didn't get to see recipes for the cakes we judged, but the recipes here are similar to ones I liked at the fair.

CHOCOLATE FUDGE CAKE

3 squares unsweetened chocolate
2 1/4 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup (1 stick) butter or margarine
2 1/4 cups firmly packed light brown sugar
3 large eggs
1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla
1 cup dairy sour cream
1 cup boiling water (add last)

Melt chocolate over low heat. Sift dry ingredients together. In a separate bowl, cream butter, brown sugar and eggs. Add vanilla and chocolate. Mix in sour cream. Add dry ingredients gradually, mixing between additions. Add boiling water last and mix again.

Bake in 3 (8-inch) layer cake pans, greased. Bake at 350° for about 25 minutes.

Frost with FUDGE FROSTING

4 squares unsweetened chocolate
1/2 cup (1 stick) butter or margarine
1 pkg. (1-lb.) powdered sugar
2 teaspoons vanilla
Melt chocolate and butter over low heat. Cool slightly; place in a mixing bowl. Add remaining ingredients and beat until smooth. Frost cake right away, because frosting hardens slightly when cool.

POUND CAKE

2 cups butter at room temperature, (not margarine)
2 cups sugar
9 eggs, separated
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 teaspoon mace or nutmeg
2 tablespoons brandy (optional)
4 cups cake flour, sifted before measuring
1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar
1/2 teaspoon salt

Cream butter; slowly add sugar, continuing to beat. Add egg yolks, one at a time, mixing after each addition. Add vanilla, mace and brandy; mix again. Sift dry ingredients; add slowly, mixing at low speed.

Whip egg whites until stiff, then fold into batter.

Pour batter into two 9x5-inch loaf pans or one 10-inch tube pan, greased. Bake at 325° for about one hour.

May be served unfrosted or frosted. (The fudge frosting from the previous recipe may be used).

PINEAPPLE UPSIDE-DOWN CAKE

1/4 cup butter or margarine
1/2 cup packed light brown sugar
1 can (8 1/4-oz.) sliced pineapple, drained
7 maraschino cherries
6 pecan halves

Cake batter:
1 1/4 cups all-purpose flour or 1 1/2 cups cake flour
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
3/4 cup milk
1/3 cup shortening
1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla

Heat margarine or butter in a round layer cake pan (9x1 1/2-inches), in 350° oven until melted. Sprinkle brown sugar over butter; place one pineapple ring in the center of the pan, cut the remaining slices into halves and arrange them around the center slice. Place cherries in the inside curves of each pineapple slice; arrange pecans around the center slice.

Mix cake batter in a mixing bowl. Pour over pineapple in pan. Bake at 350° for about 45 minutes, or until test pick comes out clean.

Invert onto a heatproof plate. Let pan remain for a few minutes, then remove. Serve warm. Makes 9 servings.

DOCUMENTING YOUR ESTATE

If part of your estate eventually will be probated (as most are), a simple but enormously useful step to save money is to organize your records and documents as completely as you possibly can now, while you're alive.

Contrary to what you might think, this is probably more important for the small estate than the large one. The time (AND cost) of searching out hard-to-locate property represents a larger percentage on a small estate than on a large one, and can represent more of a burden (loss) to heirs. However, much of the executor's time can be saved by careful planning is translated immediately into dollar savings for the estate.

Documentation is the paper foundation on which the entire house of your financial and legal existence is based. For your survivor's sake, draw up an inventory of all the information they will need. Gather the papers together, if you have them, or make careful notations as to where the papers are to be found and what they contain.

ATTEND THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE THIS SUNDAY AND EVERY SUNDAY GOD'S LOVE HAS IGNITED THE FLAMING BRILLIANCE OF AUTUMN

The Pleiades adorn the night
When chilling winds prevail, and soon
Bring frost descending from the height,
Beneath the golden harvest moon.
The leaves will turn from green to gold,
With some arrayed in blazing red;
A sign the year is growing old,
For soon the trees begin to shed.
They strip the branches dark and bare,
And lay a carpet on the ground;
Then pungent smoke will fill the air
From bonfires burning all around.
Your House of Worship teaches you
God's wondrous love is always here;
It paints the scene a brilliant hue,
This flaming autumn time of year.

Some of us call it
Autumn, and others
call it God.

Thanks A Million

DEAR MR. ROSS:
 I desperately need a pushcart, like the kind you use in a grocery store. I have an arthritic hand and the only exercise I can do is walking, with the help of a portable oxygen tank. But on a country road, it isn't easy, especially with no place to sit down when I need a rest.
 I could put my oxygen tank and a folding chair in the grocery cart and feel very secure with something to hang on to.
 When we go shopping my husband can see how much easier it is for me to walk by holding on to a cart. Problem is, I'm afraid a cart just might follow him home and then we would be in trouble. — Mrs. M.S. Brewster, N.Y.

By PERCY ROSS

DEAR MR. ROSS:
 I'm 13 years old and about 40 pounds overweight. My doctor says I need to lose the weight because I've had heart surgery and it puts a strain on my heart.
 I have a friend who belongs to an exercise club and she took me there as her guest. We played racquetball, swam and ran the track. It was so much fun to exercise this way! I'd really like to join but we haven't enough money. I have two brothers and my mom is divorced.
 Could you please send me enough money so I can join the Pacific West Racquet Club? I am on a diet, but it hasn't seemed to help me much. — S.W., Tacoma, Wash.

DEAR MISS S.:
 It sounds like you're serious about losing weight, so I'm willing to give you a start. I've arranged a six-month family membership at Pacific West Sport and Racquet Club in Tacoma. Exercise is an important part of weight loss. I hope this membership will give you the initiative to continue on your own.

DEAR MRS. S.:
 Tell your husband the next time he's in the A @ P Food Store on Route 22, there's no problem if a shopping cart follows him home.
 After speaking with manager Frank Terzigni, he's agreed that you may "borrow" one of their carts for as long as you require its use.

A Healthier You with HEALTHY NERVES

Your nerves are a news network, transmitting messages and sensations from the brain to all parts of the body. Spinal pressure on these nerves, caused by a vertebra out of alignment, can cause a variety of ailments. The Progress-Advance — Wednesday, September 3 to Tuesday, September 9, 1986 — 17

I'm speaking on behalf of our "so-called dumb animals." Our neighbor has a dog that is tied to a four- or five-foot rope 24 hours a day -- nowhere to go but sit and bark and plead for some love and attention. I have to look at this from my kitchen window. Some days I would like nothing better than to cut him loose. He couldn't be in any worse agony, or close my curtains because I know when I open them, the poor animal will still be hanging there.

George, just keep up your writings. I love hearing about where you go and what you eat. My friends like it, too.

Ladies, if you'd like to bowl for fun Tuesday afternoons in a non-sanctioned league, a meeting is planned at Ty's in Elkton this week. Get details there.

I liked that neat little dance Perry B. did at home plate in the Interfaith All-Star Softball game.

Should a counselor in a certain district be fired because he's taking classes to become a superintendent, or principal? Thank you.

Laker officials had better scratch the new 1/2-mill if they want the 1-mill renewal millage to pass.

Non-profit groups wishing to reserve space for the Community Christmas Bazaar at Laker High on Saturday, Dec. 6, 1986, may do so by calling 453-2763.

To the person who said God made the people of Camp Whatywannabe the way they are: according to your theory, rapists, murderers, child molesters and others should be left alone to continue their wrong doing. Not so. Remember, your life is God's gift to you and what you do with it is your gift to him.

Why is it that gardens of my family and neighbors always grow so much zucchini (which I hate) and so little extra corn and even potatoes (which I love)?

Remember, teens, this Saturday, Sept. 6 there's a dance just for you at the Pigeon VFW Hall. It's sponsored by Home Board Association. See the ad for details in The Progress-Advance. Come out and support this dance and there'll be more.

Lake-Chandler happenings
