STATE PARKS BUSY, TOO

Campers who want to pitch their tents or park their RVs in Michigan's state parks should act soon—or may have problems reserving space during popular dates.

This year, mid-winter and the early warmth of summer is prompting people to stake their claims early at state parks, including Port Crescent and Sleeper in Huron County. Port Crescent State Park, near Port Austin, is already booked solid for Memorial Day and the July 4th weekend.

Port Manager Bob Ely says the entire month of July is filling in Port Crescent has 131 campgrounds, which are usually reserved a year in advance, first-come, first-served basis at $8 per night for camping.

Sleeper State Park, northeast of Caseville, still has a few spots left for Memorial Day and July 4th, says Manager Terry Speakman. Memorial Day is booked, but there are two-thirds full, and the Fourth of July is nearly half full, Speakman says. Sleeper has 200 sites.

NEW IMAGE FOR CAMP?

Camp Whasawanbe near Owosso has been renamed the “Windover Resort” and is serving as a safe campground for women. The 70-acre campground on Skidway Road, just south of the Owosso- Sebewaing Road east of Owosso, isn’t seeking publicity this year, so it did last May when Camp Whasawanbe was advertised in a Detroit newspaper as a campground for “lesbians only, owned and operated by lesbians for your enjoyment.”

The camp is keeping a low profile this year, and its most recent brochure stresses the Windover Resort name, describing its purpose to provide safe recreational camping and meeting facilities for women.”

Some neighbors say the campground has been offered for sale this year, but the Windover brochure says the organization has 74 members and plans to increase membership by at least 10 percent.

LANSING — The Michigan Bean Commission and Michigan Farm Bureau have joined forces to find solutions to the problems plaguing the state's dry bean industry.

Heavy rains and flooding just prior to harvest last fall caused the loss of almost 70% of the state's Navy bean crop and severely damaged other varieties. Regaining the industry's credibility in domestic and international markets will be the major challenge of a 6-member study committee appointed by the 2 organizations.

According to Jack Laurie, president of the Michigan Farm Bureau, the committee will develop recommendations for consideration during the organization's policy development process this year. That process will start in late summer and culminate with adoption of policies by delegates to the Michigan Farm Bureau annual meeting in December.

“The dry bean industry in Michigan is a crossroads in terms of meeting the competition from other production areas, regaining credibility and reliability in the marketplace and setting direction for the future course of the business,” Laurie said. “We expect the committee will make some recommendations that will help the industry regain its viability.”

Jim Byrum, executive secretary of the Bean Commission, said that the 1986 flood losses left many growers unable to fulfill their contracts with elevators, which, in turn, left elevators unable to meet obligations to their customers.

“Other production areas, both traditional dry bean producers and new areas with no history of production, are looking at increasing bean acreage of all varieties, especially Natives, in 1987,” Byrum said.

There are dry bean contracts for 1987 production being offered to growers in other states that are not available to Michigan growers.
Stoelke farm's been in the family 112 years!

A century ago, farms were self-sufficient units at the heart of American life, where families not only grew and preserved their own food but also provided for their own needs. This meant growing everything from food crops to livestock, and even making do with what they could harvest or find.

The story of the Stoelke family farm in rural Michigan is a testament to this way of life and the resilience of the American farmer. The farm, located in a small town in Michigan, has been in the family for over 112 years. The family has been through many ups and downs, but their commitment to farming has remained unwavering.

The farm's history dates back to the late 1800s, when the Stoelke family first arrived in the area and began tilling the land. Over the years, the farm has expanded and evolved, but the family's dedication to farming has remained constant. Today, the farm is run by the fifth generation of Stoelkes, who continue to grow crops and raise livestock, just as their ancestors did.

The family has faced many challenges over the years, including the Great Depression, World War II, and more recently, the global pandemic. But through it all, the Stoelke family has persevered, adapting and innovating to ensure the survival of their farm.

The farm's success can be attributed to the family's hard work, resilience, and commitment to farming. The family has also benefited from the support of the local community, who have rallied around them during times of need.

Today, the Stoelke family farm is a source of pride for the community, and a testament to the enduring spirit of American farmers.

You have seen the amazing films of the astronauts floating around in the weightlessness environment of their space capsules. Try picking their food as a side dish at your table. This illustrates a law of God which we all take for granted until it is thus brought to our attention. When we see the only way it can be circumvented. Since most of us will never embark on a space voyage, we cannot comprehend what life would be without a discreet up and down. Objects would not remain in position and our possessions would become cast adrift into space. Water could not be related on what would have long since become an avid and lifeless planet. So with our feet planted firmly on the ground, let us thank the Lord, at our House of Worship and elsewhere, for attaching us to our terrestrial home by the law of gravity, the only one that cannot be repealed by any legislative body.

THERE IS ONE LAW OF GOD THAT WE ARE COMPELLED TO OBEY

HEADLIGHTS ON I have come on Strike into the world, that whenever we meet, we must not remain in dark: John 13:35

Children are sometimes divat id under the law of gravity to provide nightlight, so that we may have light and there is no light. Spiritually, light is also sometimes for people in darkness.

Sincerely, everywhere, indoors and outdoors at all times, please keep the law of gravity by turning on the lights in these places.

December 26 Christmas lights and our lights. By the time; light has got all been used.

Wearing of the destruction of Judah, the Lord says, "I will destroy them. Therefore the light is turned off."

Families sometimes went without a light to keep cold.

Wearing of the destruction of Jerusalem, the Lord says, "I will destroy them. Therefore the light is turned off."

Wearing of the destruction of Pro-

Philippines. It is granted because they have allowed the light to be turned off. Therefore the light is turned off. Without light, people feel useless.

When God, we are not safe and secure. He is always with us, even if we are in darkness, and will have the light with us.

Respectfully yours, as a faithful servant I urge you to ensure the safety of your family and friends. Life is precious.

We will give you the light that will guide you.

A TASTY MOREL FOR YOU...

Morel hunters won’t have to wait until mid-May to enjoy their favorite (and rai) wild mushrooms.

Unusually warm spring weather has moved the season ahead nearly two weeks, according to MSU experts. The season normally begins about May 12 in the mid-Lower Peninsula. Some morels have already been found locally, and hunters are beginning their search earlier than in past years.

Morels usually last one to two weeks after sprouting.
Cooler weather slows the cycle, experts say. And although temperatures have been perfect, lack of rain may stunt morel growth, they add.

VASSAR GETS $1 MILLION

City of Vassar leaders breathed one sigh of relief last week, when notification was received that the city qualifies for $1 million in federal flood disaster funds under the state’s Block Grant Program.

This is the first step toward Vassar’s recovery—and possible ending of the annual Cass River flooding in the center of the town, says Mayor Gerald Rubin. The city proposes to move or destroy certain flood-ravaged homes and will create a city park in the low areas.

Thus far, 52 homes have been designated for removal.
