The Progress Advance — Wednesday, July 1, 1987

By SALLY HUNT

Mary Kay Quencer remembers the days of performing her student teaching at Caseville Community Schools. She remembers a young teacher who was eager to learn and make a difference in the lives of her students. She calls those days "the best years of her life." Quencer was a Caseville resident when she was in first grade and has attended the district's Elementary School since then. She is a graduate of Caseville High School and the University of Michigan.

Quencer says that when graduate school in 1986, she returned to the district to teach. She says that she enjoys teaching because she is able to help students achieve their goals.

Quencer said that the students are the most important part of her job.
She says that she enjoys seeing the progress that they make. She says that she wants to make a difference in the lives of her students.

Quencer says that she would recommend teaching as a career to others. She says that she enjoys the sense of pride that comes with seeing her students success. She says that she enjoys the satisfaction of knowing that she has made a difference in the lives of her students.

would like to continue teaching at Caseville in the future. She says that she enjoys the feeling of satisfaction that comes
success, and she would like to continue to make a difference in the lives of
her students.
