We indulge in self-pity, lamenting our woes,
And forget the good fortune which everyone knows
The Almighty so often conferred.
Now the place of our worship will help us recall
That our gratitude should be restored;
So we don’t need a special occasion at all.
To acknowledge the love of the Lord.
Though we all have experienced trouble and strife,
We or known in faith will carry.
For the blessings we’ve had, every day of our life
Should be known as our Thanksgiving Day.

THANKS A MILLION

Perce Ross

In one of our recent issues we published a letter from K.J. Deschler of Bothell, Wash., who described how she had been missing her cat for 2 months after it had been stolen. She wrote that she had almost given up hope of ever seeing her cat again, but one day she received a call from the local animal shelter telling her that her cat had been found. She was overjoyed and went to pick up her cat, which she had named "Patches." She was so grateful for the shelter's efforts that she decided to donate $100 to their organization.

A Different Hunt

By Duane Guenther

Back hunters are a breed of their own. They are often referred to as "backpackers," "woodsmen," or "survivors." Their method of hunting is typically conducted in the woods, where they often travel long distances on foot in search of prey. Back hunters are often considered to be more skilled and knowledgeable about the outdoors than other types of hunters.

Having been born near Arrow Rock, Mo., I was a "good passing down hunting family."

by Duane Guenther

When I was a child, my family would often go on hunting trips in the woods. We would pack up our supplies and set out early in the morning, sometimes staying out all day. The weather was usually cold and the terrain was rugged, but we always had a great time. I remember one trip in particular where we saw a large bear. We were amazed and scared at the same time. It was an exciting experience that I will never forget.

TRANSPORTING GAME ...

This article is part of a series of articles on the topic of hunting in the woods. Future articles will cover topics such as how to prepare for a hunt, what to wear, and how to handle game.

Quilting... A Tradition From Our Past Continues Today in Pigeon

By AMY HEIDEN

QUITTING: Quilting has been a popular pastime around the world. The oldest known quilt is a martingale from the 16th Century. The first step in making a quilt is to cut the fabric. Quilts are a product of both practicality and creativity. By simply joining pretty fabrics and trimming them with a decorative border, the quilt will become an art piece. A large number of quilts are made by women, and there are many women who have made quilts throughout the world. A group of women in the Pigeon Quilt Guild share the tradition of making quilts for the community.

CREATIVE OUTLET: Quilting is a perfect creative outlet for both the beginning and experienced quilter. It offers a place for the quilter to express their creative abilities. A new quilt is being started, and a new beginning is always the most exciting part of the process. The quilt is put together and the designs are completed, and then it is quilted and the finishing touches are added. The quilt is then displayed and enjoyed by the quilter and others who appreciate the art of quilting.

THERAPY FROM A CAUSE: The quilt is also used as a tool to help people cope with the loss of a loved one. Quilting is a way to express your feelings and to create a lasting memory of a loved one. Quilting is also used as a therapy for those who are in need of a creative outlet. A quilter can use the quilt as a way to express their feelings and to create a lasting memory of a loved one.
