Plenty of changes ahead in 2010

S everal publications have recently been published that describe the stories of life in the year 2010. Author John Dibold, writing in the pages of this magazine, predicts that the year will see tremendous changes. In his article, "The Year 2010: A Look Ahead," Dibold notes that many changes will occur in various aspects of society, including technology, healthcare, and the environment.

Dibold suggests that the rapid pace of change will be driven by advances in technology, which will continue to revolutionize how we live and work.

In the field of healthcare, Dibold predicts that there will be significant breakthroughs in medicine, leading to better treatments and cures for many diseases.

Another area that will see major changes is the environment. Dibold highlights the growing concern about climate change and the need for action to mitigate its effects.

Overall, Dibold argues that the year 2010 will be a time of significant change and opportunity.

However, he cautions that these changes will not come without challenges, and that it will be up to individuals and society as a whole to navigate the new landscape and create a better future.

We encourage our readers to stay informed and engaged as they look towards the year 2010 and the changes that lie ahead.

Know your insurance rights!

By BARRA HEYMAN, Extension Economist

What did you do last year for your insurance policy renewal? If you are like most people, you may have renewed without even glancing through your policy.

Your policyholder’s initial obligation under a comprehensive insurance policy is to read and understand what the policy covers. The language used in the policy has evolved, and is usually written in generalities and jargon, so that even the most dedicated policyholder cannot understand its fine print.

For example, the policyholder’s principal obligation is to pay the premium—this means to provide financial backing and assurance that the insurance company will be able to pay claims when they arise.

There are several other important responsibilities of the policyholder, including:

- Pay the premium
- Provide accurate and complete information about the insured property
- Provide all relevant information to the insurance company

Exclusions—describes risks that are not covered by the policy. Other important obligations of the policyholder include:

- Pay the premium
- Provide accurate and complete information about the insured property
- Provide all relevant information to the insurance company

ATTEND THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE THIS SUNDAY

We all make the mistake of assuming that anything on this earth will go on forever, and holding our lives upon it; for this is simply not true. The tide of business can turn, and even long-established companies may suddenly go under. While towns can be leveled by earthquakes or tornadoes. Mountains rise and fall, tomorrows advance and recede. The stars change positions, however imperceptibly, during our lifetimes. The lives of human beings are in a constant state of change, with the passage of time. The only thing in this world that remains unchanged is the love of God.

We should thank Him for it and realize that it may cause even some of these tragedies to be blessings in disguise.

Aunt Martha’s a special case. She has a lot of influence in the neighborhood.

Because of the large number of babies she has borne, she is known in the neighborhood as "the mother of the babies." Her influence is felt in every part of the city. She is a member of the "Baby Club," which meets every Wednesday evening in her room at the hospital.

Her influence is felt in the way the babies are cared for. The hospital staff is well trained and dedicated, but they know that Martha is always there to provide a helping hand when needed.

In conclusion, Aunt Martha's influence in the neighborhood is a testament to her dedication and care for the babies she has borne.

Exclusive Thumb Area

Perhaps I am selfish, but I am one of those odd-balls who prefers the solitary pursuit of fish and game.

I defined my weight slightly to the right leg which had been pushed under my body for more than an hour. The sudden pressure caused me to discover that my blood vessels had burst, and the blood flowed freely into the left side of my head, where I had been penetrated by a bullet. I was in a state of panic, unable to move, and I realized that I could not live. The next few minutes were a blur of pain, and I knew that I was dead. The only thing that remained was my fear of death. The tread of the morning passed uneventfully. I responded to the cries of jellied mice with the juice from the apples.

Latter in the evening, still daydreaming, I started a small fire with flour and bread and breaded over a few inches of my head, using my weight to keep it burning. I was drifted below the horizon long ago and the only person who knew was the woman who fetched fire through the darkness, the woman who could not be seen, the woman who was afraid, the woman who was dead, and the woman who was afraid. The fire showed against the west wood and a quick sound across the silence. The sound was no longer there, and I realized that I was no longer there. I was dead, and the fire was no longer there. The fire showed against the west wood and a quick sound across the silence. The sound was no longer there, and I realized that I was no longer there. I was dead, and the fire was no longer there.
