By AMY HEIDEN
Acting on the recommendation of the administrative salary committee, the Board of Education voted Monday night to name Robert J. Drury as new superintendent.

Drury will formally be presented to the Board of Education at its meeting on July 1, and will hold that position until Dec. 31, when retiring superintendent Harry Brunel will officially step down.

FROM UNDER THE WILLOW

BY ANDREA DOVER

EDITOR'S NOTE: This "From Under the Willow" column is being expanded for more frequent publication in the Progress Advance. A brief description of the columnist's sense of humor is given as a lead-in. The column is to appear on a regular basis.

Baker's Dozen

I used to be a baker, a self-taught, home-baked professional baker. I made everything from scratch, from bread to cakes and pies. I ran a small bakery in Portland, Maine.

The bakery was called "Baker's Dozen". It started as a small operation in a small commercial building. The place was cozy and inviting, with warm lighting and a welcoming atmosphere.

One of my signature items was my famous chocolate chip cookies. I used the best ingredients, including high-quality chocolate chips. They were a hit among the customers and became the most popular item on the menu.

I enjoyed the community aspect of my business. Customers would come in to chat and share recipes, and I would often give away samples of my baked goods. People would come in just to smell the warm, delicious aroma of freshly baked cookies.

As the bakery grew in popularity, I decided to expand the operation. I rented a larger space in a different location and opened a new branch.

In addition to the chocolate chip cookies, I also offered a variety of other baked goods, including cakes, pies, and muffins. I was particularly proud of my sour cream coffee cake, which was a customer favorite.

The bakery was a true labor of love for me. I enjoyed creating new recipes and experimenting with different flavors. I took great pride in using fresh, high-quality ingredients and paying attention to every detail of the baking process.

Despite the challenges of running a small business, I found the experience to be incredibly rewarding. I loved the sense of accomplishment that came with creating delicious baked goods and the joy that my creations brought to others.

I eventually sold the bakery to a friend who shared my passion for baking and continued to operate it under the same name. I retired from the bakery business but still enjoy baking at home for my family and friends.

Pete Progress Says:

"You don't really appreciate how far ahead you go until you see a young person start his first job. At a salary you would want to reach by the time you retire."

Brown St. paving to begin following committee's approval

BY AMY HEIDEN

City officials believe Brown Street in Elkin will be much more attractive when the paving is completed. The paving will begin in late January or early February.

The Elkin City Council approved the paving project at its meeting last week. The paving will be done in sections to minimize disruption to traffic.

The paving will include a new drainage system, curbs, and sidewalks. The final project will be completed in early 2023.

The paving is expected to improve the appearance of the neighborhood and increase its value. It is also expected to reduce the risk of flooding and improve stormwater management.

Dormant, bare root planting time certainly is here!

By Ed Hutchison

Many gardeners mine out on a huge quantity of interesting plants because they are not packaged and sold in pretty cardboard boxes. Is it if they were free or by buying a bare root plant. You can grow almost anything you want for your garden by this method. You can buy 100 trees for $100 and that is the cost of the trees, essentially. So, there's a lot of opportunity here. There are many kinds of trees that are available. You can have a really nice, attractive garden with just a few dollars.

A different approach is to buy trees in the dormant season, when they are available in January or February. At that time, you can find trees that are already established and have been shipped to you directly from the nursery. You can then plant them in your garden and enjoy the benefits of having trees that are already established.

Another approach is to plant trees during the growing season, when they are in active growth. In this case, you will need to provide additional care to ensure that the trees survive and grow properly. However, this approach can be more rewarding, as the trees will be able to establish themselves more quickly and grow to their full potential.

In summary, the key to successful tree planting is to choose the right time and approach for planting, and to provide the necessary care and attention to the trees once they are planted.

GIVE BARE ROOT PLANTS a good watering before the hole is completely filled with soil.
