

As We See It...EDITORIALLY

We can't really do anything about the weather, can we??

Two distinct schools of thought exist, concerning whether or not the drought now being suffered and endured is caused by man or just a quirk of nature. As with debates about the existence of multiple presidential killers, spy conspiracies and other argumentative topics, this one likely won't be resolved soon.

But in the meantime, we'll all be watching the skies and hoping for moisture to help grow crops, green-up lawns, plump up garden prizes — and keep break-even farmers from going further under.

One group of observers says the earth's overuse and actual abuse of chemicals and fossil fuels has resulted in the "greenhouse effect" settling in at least a decade earlier than had been expected. That effect is when our protective ozone layer of atmosphere is slowly stripped away, leaving the sun's rays to overly warm our lands. Those experts say we'll see gradual temperature rises — in the range of four degrees in the next 20 to 30 years — all over the world, thanks to the greenhouse effect to trap hot air.

That may not sound like much to you, but even a four-degree temperature swing would have a profound impact on our earth. Some areas — perhaps such as ours — which now are perfect for crop growing would become too warm to raise seeds... and already-warm places such as Florida may become inhabitable altogether.

Think just a moment what that would mean. We'd be looking northward, to Minnesota, our own Upper Peninsula and even Canada for the crop production we now manage. What would happen to towns, counties and entire states where growing seasons no longer were viable? What would happen in the new-found prosperity of areas suddenly busy in crop production? What about our own land values, and the at-home way of life we've come to know?

To be brief, things would certainly be in utter turmoil worldwide. And this lack of rainfall now facing our Midwest area may — or may not — be a sign of such a longer-range trend. No expert knows for sure, and none is predicting any set of circumstances with certainty.

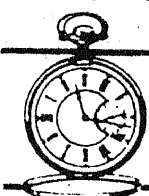

The other viewpoint is far more traditional. It says the recent unusual weather patterns — heavy rain two years ago, dryness last year and actual drought this spring and early summer — are just that: patterns. They've happened but not with any overall design, or impact to be gauged, evaluated and discussed.

These weather watchers say we'll be getting more rain soon, probably. It has always rained, and it will do so again.

Actually, on the face of it, believing fully in either viewpoint is probably the most dangerous response we could make. The world likely won't change dramatically in the next few months, and it probably WILL rain in ample amounts... sometime.

But either one of these viewpoints COULD prove to be right or wrong, depending on what the divine gardener really has in mind for His planet. It's not up to us to decide, yet it IS up to us to do the very best we can with what we've been given.

Until we're sure we ARE doing that, we run the risk that we do more harm than good on this fragile globe...

60 SECONDS

God works for Good

Read Romans 8:28-39
We know that in everything God works for good with those who love Him. Romans 8:28

Would you care to eat a teaspoon of salt or a cup of flour? Or drink a teaspoon of vanilla?

Each of these is unpleasant to the taste.

Yet these and other ingredients — some of which are not at all tasty — can make a delicious cake.

What happens in the baking of a cake happens in the lives of God's children.

The Lord can turn headaches, heartaches, and heartbreaks to our good. What kind of good? Through painful experiences God can make us more understanding, sympathetic, patient, and grateful.

Through troubles He can clear our vision to see the difference between the important and the trivial.

In difficult and dark days God can draw us closer to Himself.

God's wonderful promise, however, is limited to those who love Him.

God loved us so much that He gave His Son to die so that we might live forever.

Do we love Him because of that?

Do we demonstrate our love by putting Him first in our life and by loving His children?

Do we trust His promise: "In everything God works for good with those who love Him"?

Heavenly Father, help us believe that You are greater than any problem and that You can turn our harsh experiences to our good. For Jesus' sake we express this faith. Amen.

RECOLLECTIONS
Of By-Gone Days
BY GEORGE KEIM

DEAR EDITOR:

Last Saturday I was in Sebawaing to see the Sugar Festival Parade. I sat on a folding chair on a lawn I have been sitting on for quite a while to see the parade.

The first time I was at that place was several years ago the late Art Ebert was there and we sat on the porch. There was a small maple tree on the lawn, but it was only a little tree then.

One time I was over there and had five of my grandchildren with me. They almost ran me ragged! One wanted this and one wanted that and then they scrapped with each other and poor Grandpa didn't know what to do.

Another time when I was there I only had two grandchildren with me and they behaved really well.

The last time I was there I was alone. Mrs. Floyd Deming of Bay Port was also there and that little tree that was there now is a nice tree and was a real nice shade.

They had a good parade and some very nice floats. Kids got a lot of candy. I enjoyed the pipe bands and those little cars that the shriners drive around were very cute. Everything was in good order.

When the parade was over, the lady of the house came out and said she was looking for me and told me anytime I wanted to sit under her tree, I sure could! Well, I wanted to see the park so I drove down the street and saw the last end of the parade again.

I didn't know there were so many John Deere tractors left. I saw a lot of people I knew and many I didn't know. A lot of people called me by name whom I didn't know, but that doesn't matter because I don't like to say, "Who are you?"

At night I went to the Hayes Church Strawberry Social and had a good dish of ice cream and cake. The ladies sent some free cake home with me and said all I had to do was promise to come again next year.

Time sure does go fast and I just can't help but think of the first time I saw a big parade. It was in Elkton. They had what they called a "homecoming." The parade was quite long and they had some brand new cars and they were new then, but that was back in 1924 and if they were in a parade today, they'd get more attention now than they did then.

There were a lot of stands, too, where you spun wheels and threw balls to knock down pins or rag dolls. I was still quite young and I only had 25 cents, but that was a lot of money in those days. Well, I got an ice cream cone and a big one at that and a hot dog and took a ferris wheel ride and still had 10 cents left!

SINCERELY,
GEORGE KEIM

What a thrill!....!

By SALLY RUMMEL

What could be more thrilling than sitting in the first row at a Detroit Pistons game, then being able to visit the locker room and have your picture taken with the Pistons' Ralph Lewis?

Especially if you're a four year old boy like former Pigeon resident Russell Voss, now of Oxford, who was named "Honorary Ball Boy" for the Friday, April 15 Detroit Pistons vs. Milwaukee Bucks game at the Pontiac Silverdome.

Voss, son of Kathy Voss, also of Oxford, and with local relatives, was the winner of a contest sponsored by the Summit Place Mall in Pontiac. His prizes include four first-row game tickets, Pistons t-shirt, an autographed regulation basketball, a visit to the locker room and...a photo session with Ralph Lewis of the Pistons, who introduced him and presented young Russ with a basketball as part of pre-game activities.

As of this past Friday, Lewis was picked in the expansion draft to go to the new Charlotte, S.C. NBA franchise team.

According to young Voss, the most exciting part of the day was shaking hands with Rick Mahorn. "He bent down to shake my hand and I didn't have to reach way up to him," explained Voss.

Now that's enough to make anyone's day, whether you're four or 44!

DETROIT PISTONS player Ralph Lewis was one of the pro basketball stars former area resident Russell Voss got to meet recently. PHOTO FURNISHED

The last problem you need when your business is growing is a lawsuit.

Growth is no problem. Or at least, it's the kind of problem you don't mind dealing with when you're in business. Over many years, you've perfected your product. Battled your competition. And kept your financial head above water. So you don't need a lawsuit to take it all away. That's why you should know about the Commercial Umbrella Liability policy from Auto-Owners. It will protect all your business assets from loss due to a lawsuit. You'll be able to get the Commercial Umbrella's broad liability protection at a low cost. And, if you even want to add personal protection, that's offered at a reduced rate. Ask your "no problem" Auto-Owners agent just how he can prevent you a loss from suit. So all you'll have to think about is increasing your production.

Hobby space still available

Would you like to take part in the celebration of Pigeon Farmers' Festival to run from July 27-31?

The weekend will be filled with special activities, including a Pigeon Chamber of Commerce sponsored Hobby and Craft Fair to run Thursday, Friday and Saturday, July 28-30.

Booths are now available, with each participant allowed four card tables or two long folding tables for a total of 12 feet (half spaces are also available). Occupants are required to use the same space each day, and an extra charge is required for electricity. All cars must be parked in the Municipal Parking Lot and not left in the street. Organizer Rhonda Buehler stresses that the parking spaces MUST be left for the customers who are shopping in Pigeon.

Monies for the space should be sent in advance, to eliminate the last-minute confusion during the Festival itself. Checks may be made payable to the "Pigeon Chamber of Commerce."

A member of the Chamber will be in front of the Pigeon Village Hall to assign spaces. Set-up time is from 8 to 9 a.m. each day of the event.

After high school, McCairns played basketball at Delta College and later Steubenville, Ohio and Western Michigan. He learned through schooling and jobs that he liked restaurant work, and opened two restaurants in Las Vegas in the late 1970s.

He worked his way up to broiler chef and manager through the long hours and dedication to quality that restaurant work demands—and prepared food for entertainer Bill Cosby, singer Lou Rawls and others.

McCairns later moved to Ogden, Utah and worked in furniture sales for five years during the days—while cooking in restaurants at night.

"The first night I didn't have any steaks come back from customers I said to myself, 'This is what I enjoy.' But even more than cooking, I like being out front, meeting people and running things."

While in Utah, he opened two more restaurants and served as a kitchen chef and manager. But he still kept in touch with friends back in Michigan and his mother, Phyllis McCairns, who still lives in Lake Township.

HOME AGAIN: A call to Jay Dubej nearly two years ago got the ball rolling, he recalls. "I couldn't believe they were going to do this," he says of the restaurant concept. "I had to come home."

"They've got the desire to make this succeed, and I'm going to do what I can. It takes lots of hours."

"This is my dream. It's what I've always wanted to do, start a fine restaurant here at home. We wanted to come home."

McCairns and his wife, Shirlene, have moved into the former Muentener house, built about 1898—so a remodeling job awaits them there, too, he says with a laugh.

The couple has four children, seven-year-old daughter Tia, five-year-old twin boys Brayden and Kason and three-year-old daughter Keeli Mae.

McCairns says he expects the restaurant will be open in late fall—and (with a smile) reminds people that reservations for Christmas parties at "Greenfields" will be accepted soon...

FARM REPORT

HAY-FORAGE DAY IS JULY 7

An action-packed field day covering forage production and harvesting methods will be held at Lynn Island Farm, 15205 Turner Road, Capac, from 9:30 am-5 pm Thursday, July 7, sponsored by Cooperative Extension Service. There will be demonstrations by dealers, presentations on forage stands, insect damage control, harvesting options and many other helpful lectures and offerings. Eric Frahm, Tuscola Extension farm agent, has more information. He can be called at 673-5999, Ext. 228.

DROUGHT REDUCING CROPS

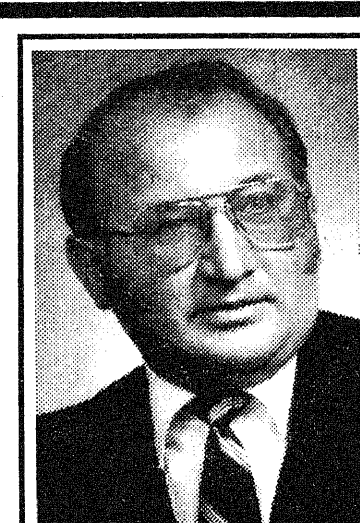

Production prospects for 1988 winter wheat is forecast at slightly over 29 million bushels, a drop of 6% from a month ago, but still 52% over the 1987 output. Yields are expected at 47 bushels, 3 bushels below the May 1 forecast. Nationally winter wheat production is forecast at 1.57 billion bushels, up slightly over 1987. White winter wheat is forecast at 185.8 million bushels, down 5% from last year.

Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Richmond entertained 140 guests at an Open House on Sunday, honoring their daughter Andrea, a Laker High School graduate.
A buffet-style dinner was served, with the school colors of mint green and silver used as decorations.
Swimming was included in the day's activities.
Out-of-town guests were present from Ann Arbor, Traverse City, Midland and Weidman.
Andrea has enrolled at Alma College for the fall.

Weed wackers & power equipment

By ED HUTCHISON

Gardeners in the Thumb can thank a frustrated Texan for the invention of the weed wacker and with it, the birth of an industry bent on helping us keep our lawns and gardens neat.

It was just 17 years ago when George Ballas figured there had to be a better way to keep the grass from growing around the gnarled roots of his two big oaks.

His answer was found in an empty popcorn can, laced with nylon fishing line and mounted on a lawn edger. It was noisy, but worked. Weeds flew and so did grass and dirt and Americans had new muscle in the yard.

Muscle-power has grown over the years so much so that the putt-putt of the rotary lawn mower is being drowned out by trimmers, blowers and other lawn and garden power tools.

The dilemma now is deciding what's really needed and how to use it for the best results. It is easy to spend more money than is necessary and possibly have the landscape and pocketbook suffer from horsepower overkill. Keep these tips in mind when shopping for nylon trimmers and blowers.

GASOLINE OR ELECTRIC-POWERED?

Since 1983, the trend has been to gas engines, according to Charles Hodges, a spokesman for Poulan/Weed Eater.

Gas machines are still a bit heavier than electric and cost about twice as much, but consumers don't seem to mind. They like being freed from dragging a long extension cord around the yard. Hodges said gas engines are lighter and quieter than five years ago.

The price difference narrows in the mid-range and better models and by the time a 100-foot, outdoor rated extension cord is bought for the electric model, the difference is insignificant.

Because gas units vibrate more than electric, they tend to be more tiring to use — and can lead to sore arms and joints if operated for a long time. Manufacturers use foam, gaskets or ingenious design to lessen vibration and usually mention the fact on the carton or in the owner's manual. Check it out before choosing a gas model.

Noise is also a concern. Ask the dealer to demonstrate gas and electric models. While gas is usually noisier, there will be a big difference in noise output among various models. An independent test conducted to convince the Pasadena (Calif.) city council that leaf blowers weren't all that noisy showed a 15% difference in noise output. That may not seem like a lot until you've been listening to an engine for 30 minutes and will soon appreciate anything quieter.

VERSALITY — How much do you need? You will pay more for a unit that has other tools as options. Some of the higher-priced trimmers can be fitted with blowers, snow-throwers and brush blades. That's fine, but if you already have a leaf blower and live on a city lot where the sumac disappeared long ago, then this do-everything model may not be right for you.

Take care in choosing do-everything models. My limited experience with garden equipment that is engineered to do several dissimilar tasks is that the tasks are not done well. Single task machines, for example, one that trims weeds and grass with a high-velocity nylon cord, does so very well and earns its keep in the garage.

If accessories are important, choose those that work as a companion to the machine's primary job, like a gutter clean-out attachment for a leaf blower. This is nothing fancier than shooting air through a long tube and into the gutter to dislodge fallen leaves. It is safer than cleaning out gutters by climbing ladders or crawling along the edge of a rooftop. The accessory does not make the tool into something it isn't and that's why it works well.

SAFETY — On trimmers, check the size and integrity of the shield over the trimming head. Is it big enough and shaped to block stones or sticks that are catapulted from the ground by the nylon cord? Is there a retaining strap or clip on trimmers and blowers to hold the extension cord or will the cord be yanked out when it is pulled an inch too tight?

Look to see that important controls, especially the off button or switch, are easily reached. On gas models, be sure the muffler area is well-shielded and away from an area of the machine that might touch you. How's the heft? Is the weight distributed evenly, especially with machines like gas-powered trimmers that require two hands.

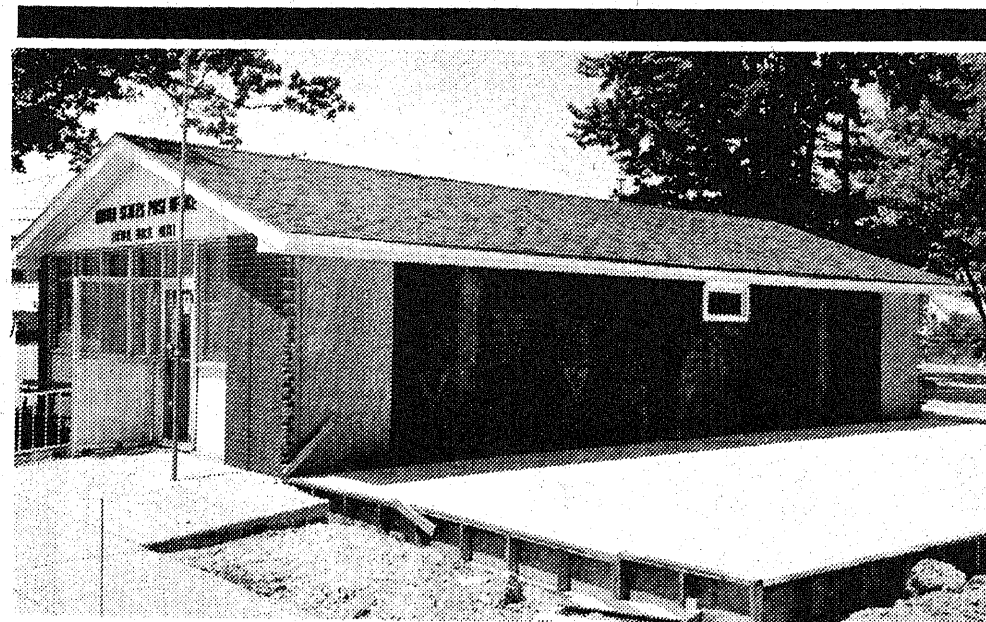

It's easy and smart to add a measure of personal safety by wearing goggles or shatter-proof glasses when operating a trimmer and ear protection when using a blower, especially a gas-powered unit.

PRUDENT USE — Yard power is a great sweat and time saver, but can be a plant slayer if improperly used. Don't let the nylon cord on trimmers whip against trunks of trees or stems of shrubs. Cutting open the bark lets in insects and disease and if severe enough, hurts the plant's ability to move food and water up and down the trunk.

SHOP FOR OUTDOOR power tools that are well-balanced and have controls easily reached. Often, single-task tools such as this blower are more efficient and less expensive and those that accept a variety of tool attachments.

ELKTON P.O. GROWING: After several months of hesitation, expansion work has begun at the Elkton Post Office. Bricks have been stripped off the east wall, and a 20-ft. by 48-ft. section is being built on, says Postmaster Tom Balzer.

When completed, new boxes will be installed, and more space for boxholders and lobby use will be provided. Bob Hunter of Cass City owns the building, and improvements should be completed within three weeks.

Pigeon First UM hosts new pastoral family

By AMY HEIDEN

Pigeon's First United Methodist Church welcomed a new pastor over the weekend as Rev. James Schwandt took over the pulpit. Rev. Schwandt is a native of Royal Oak, and comes to Pigeon from St. Paul's United Methodist in Rochester.

Rev. Schwandt and his wife, Yvonne, have two children, James, Jr. (Jay), age 15, who will be a sophomore at Laker High this fall, and Heidi, age 13, who will be an eighth grader at Laker Junior High.

Yvonne is an LPN who also has training to be able to assist in an elementary school computer lab and she enjoys poetry and reading and easy listening music. Rev. Schwandt says he counts computers, clowning, camping and golf among his favorite activities, while Heidi and Jay are both accomplished musicians, Jay on piano and trombone, and Heidi on clarinet.

Rev. Schwandt and his family are no strangers to the Thumb, having served at the Deckerville and Minden City church, but she says that this area of the Thumb is quite different.

"The people here seem to be more open. They're more hospitable and more friendly than I could ever imagine. The town is so clean, it really struck me as I drove into town. I hope we get to stay here a long time, at least till the kids graduate," Rev. Schwandt said.

REV. JAMES SCHWANDT is shown with his family. Standing, from left, are Heidi, James, Jr. (Jay) and his wife, Yvonne. PHOTO FURNISHED

Thanks A Million

By PERCY ROSS

You may write to Percy Ross in care of The Progress-Advance, P.O. Box 35000, Minneapolis, MN 55435. Please include your telephone number with your letter.

DEAR MR. ROSS:
Can you help me? I'm a 48 year old diabetic. Four years ago, I was laid off from my job. My age and illness have made it extremely difficult to find employment. I knew I had to make an all-out winning effort or else I was going to be left in the dust. I started with adult basic education and got my G.E.D. Then I joined a job club and finally got employment as a security officer.

Today I'm employed by a security company and make $3.50 an hour. Out of my wages comes rent, telephone, car payments, uniforms, doctor bills, medicine and needles. This is not complaining — just stating the facts. However, due to new regulations, I must have 120 hours of Ohio Peace Officer training to the tune of $350. After completion, I would make $5 an hour, so it's a good investment. It's not exactly like an option though — I'll lose my present job if I don't get the training. I have so many other bills to pay, and so little to pay them with. Again I ask — can you help? — Mr. C.C., Richmond, IN.

DEAR MR. C.:
Granting your request will probably be the easiest thing I'll do today. To start with, you're not asking me to bail you out from the depths of despair. Yours is a straightforward case. A helping hand from my end will improve your overall quality of life. And you know why? Not because I personally helped you, but because you're willing to work to help yourself.

Yes, sir, this a natural happening in my book... my check is as good as in your pocket!

DEAR MR. ROSS:
I have a problem I can't handle on my own anymore. It's my husband — he has a very destructive, violent temper. Dishes and furniture have been thrown and broken. Doors have been punched in, windows knocked out and my children's toys destroyed.

He refuses to go for counseling. He's never hurt me or the kids physically, but emotionally I can't handle it anymore. I'd appreciate $500 to pay my mother back. Then I'll be able to get the kids out of this environment — some place where we'll feel safe. My intent is to go to the local agency for battered women.

A law enforcement officer recommended it and said the agency would provide emotional support when I need it. I hope you can help me and thank for listening. — Mrs. E.A., Deluth, MN.

DEAR MRS. A.:
Well, I'm still listening, because I'd like to hear why you have to pay your mother $500 before leaving your violent spouse. I don't see where one has anything to do with the other. If you're in a threatening situation, by all means do something about it. Removing yourself from this environment would be a good place to start.

However, waiting for me to pay your mother — and for what I don't know — sounds like you're looking for excuses to stay in a bad situation, rather than change it. Sorry, but I don't see where my $500 will help you. — $$$$$$$$$$ —

DEAR MR. ROSS:
I don't usually go around asking for help, but this is a very special request. For more than a year, I've spent most of my time taking care of my daughter's two children, ages four years and 21 months.

My daughter works a full-time plus a part-time job. They're both low-paying jobs, so there isn't much left after paying the rent, groceries, children's needs and so on.

I daydream a lot, wishing I had enough money to hire a reliable person to watch the kids for a few days. Perhaps I'd do some window shopping, take long walks like I used to or just sit around in the park and feed the ducks in the pond.

That's all I ask — just a little peace and quiet. — Tired Grandpa, Sacramento, Calif.

DEAR GRANDPA:
After reviewing your letter, my editor quickly reminded me what happened the last time I granted someone a few mental health days. I received an onslaught of mail berating me for spending my money on such a frivolous request.

I told Miss Webber to heck with those people... man doesn't live by bread alone. So my check to provide you with a few days of peace and quiet is on the way.

You're reading The Progress-Advance and we thank you.

Something To Think About

JOHN A. CHAMPAGNE
DIRECTOR

BURIAL MONUMENT RESTRICTIONS

It sometimes happens that a person chooses a cemetery only to find out afterward that he or she cannot erect the type of burial monument desired. This is something to check on since each cemetery handles this matter differently.

In some town cemeteries the height and weight of monuments are carefully regulated by municipal decree. In others the type of inscription and the materials the marker is made of is legislated by cemetery policy. Some cemeteries will not allow large statuary or unusual stones to mark the graves. They require that markers be identical or that they be flush with the ground, making them difficult to find. This type of strict uniformity is designed to keep the cemetery looking simple, neat, and democratic. It does in fact defend against the outrageous or grotesque monuments that some people would erect. However, it does not allow for much individuality or freedom of expression.

Leipprandt leaving Lakers

Laker math teacher and freshman basketball coach Joel Leipprandt will be leaving Laker High this fall to accept a position at Ionia High School. In his new position, Leipprandt will teach mathematics and coach Ionia's varsity basketball team, the Bulldogs.

Leipprandt is excited about his new position, saying "I'm the type of person who gets stagnant very easily. I like the challenge of new things. This is an opportunity to do something different and meet new people. But I've enjoyed my four years here at Lakers." He is the son of Ted and Peg Leipprandt of Pigeon, and he and his wife Melanie and sons Joel and Tyler will be moving to Ionia around the first of August.

Volunteers Aid Plant Of 190,000 Walleyes

"The best Walleye plant so far" is how the 1988 fry-to-fingerling growing season in Fish Point Walleye Pond is being described, following release of 190,000 of the small fish last week.

While success in the past 5 years has been only fair, the 1988 season to move baby Walleyes into Saginaw Bay was tremendous.

Releases were carried out Wednesday, with about 72,000 fingerlings going into the Wiscoggin Drain, 60,000 into the Quanicasssee Area, 38,000 at Sebewaing between Sportsmen's - VFW Hall and Boat Launch Park on Sebewaing River, and 20,000 into the Allen Drain.

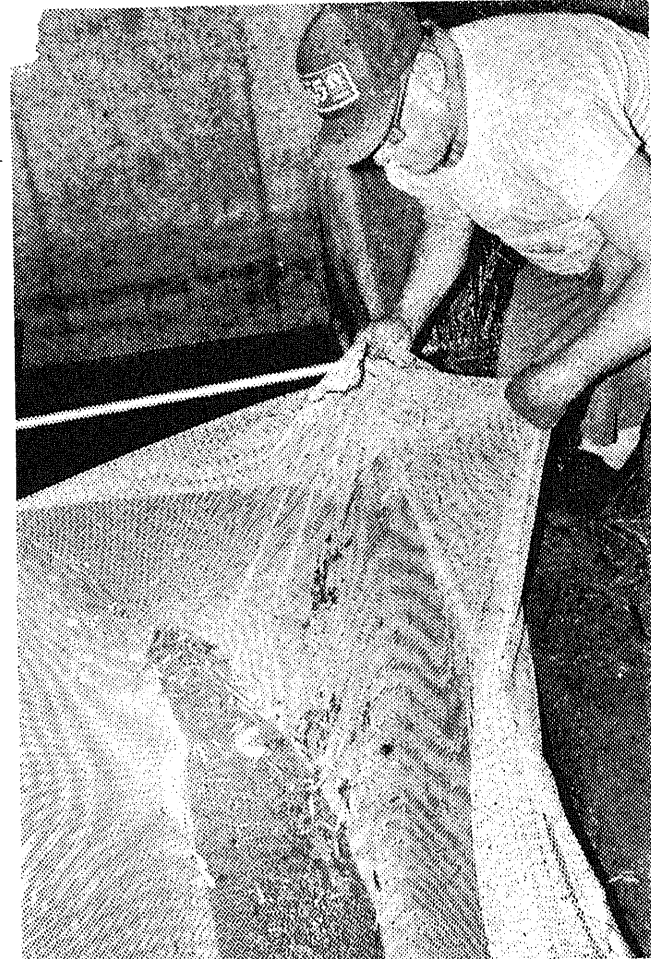

"They were of excellent size", DNR staff people said, "with many about 3 inches in length." That growth was attained in about 60 days in the Fish Point Walleye Pond.

Originally, when the 3 bags of fry were dumped into the Pond in late April, they were believed to contain 50,000 fry each, for a total of 150,000. When the Fish Point Pond was being drained last week, the number of fingerlings soon zoomed far beyond the 150,000.

Checking with the DNR revealed that each bag had contained 70,000 fry, for a total of 210,000. The 190,000 brought into fingerling stage is considered excellent.

Reason for the improvement is the close watch on dike, water and growing conditions in the Fish Point Pond maintained by members of Gateway Sportsmen's Club. Repairs made on dikes last fall and this spring were another factor.

John "Sonny" Mihacsi headed the Gateway members who observed and inspected the pond every day since the fry were planted there on April 29.

They registered water depth, reported to the DNR, and checked water conditions and plankton numbers.

So watchful were "Sonny" Mihacsi and other members that when they observed seagulls and ducks congregating around the pond for a fingerling feast, members brought in plastic and wood owl decoys. Gulls and other birds fear owls and so they stay away from places where owls are visible.

"Sonny" Mihacsi was elated over the success of the fingerling releases. "It meant a lot of visits and plenty of tramping around the pond, but it was done the way it should be done, and it paid off", he said.

The Fish Point Pond results were better than any other that was dumped up to last weekend, he said.

Tourney Set To Open

Walleye fishermen will compete for over $3,000 in prizes during the Sebewaing Sportsmen's Club's 1988 Walleye Tournament, July 8, 9 & 10. Teams of 2-4 fishermen will face-off in the 5th annual event. Registration forms are available at Don's Sport Shop and Kelly's Western Auto in Sebewaing, and Gale's Bait in Quanicasssee. For more information, call 883-3361.

THE VOLUNTEER CREW started to empty the Walleye Pond at Fish Point before sun-up Wednesday morning. Department of Natural Resources employees Robin Ziegler and Carrie Hinken, shown here at left, checked sizes of the young Walleye fingerlings as other crew members opened the pond's drain. After 60 days under the close watch of Gateway Club members, 190,000 fingerlings were released into Saginaw Bay.

— Bush Pilots —

The Cessna tipped to the right and the panorama on the ground below spilled into sight. The ground was covered with brush, small, insignificant-looking lakes and trees -- lots and lots of trees. I must confess, I immediately looked for a good place to land. I casually mentioned my thoughts to the gentleman flying the plane and he stated I would make an excellent bush pilot for that is what he does all the time.

His hand reached forward and twisted the throttle slowing the whine of the engine considerably. The small plane wallowed for a moment and then the prop bit back into the air. Next, he pulled a lever beside his seat and the wing flaps dropped into a sharp angled position, the plane slowed even more.

Leaning forward and peering over the engine's cowling I finally spotted our destination. Near the end of the lake, nestled in a thick stand of Black Spruce was a small strip of very rough gravel. Bush pilots called them strips, but to pilgrims, like myself, they closely resembled a tiny clearing for a vegetable garden.

The plane wallowed more noticeably now. Sinking fast, it seemed to be on a collision course with the tall spruces at the end of the runway. The stall buzzer blared in my ear and if I hadn't been so interested I'm sure I would have closed my eyes. We were near the ground and the pilot worked frantically to make last-minute adjustments before the wheels touched. A frantic thought from the night before raced through my mind. My nephew, a former jet fighter pilot with thousands of hours in the air, discussing flying and landing, casually mentioned that every landing a plane made was nothing more than a controlled crash. I locked my knees in an effort to slow the plane down but it was too late.

With a resounding crash we made contact with the gravel bar and the plane bounced merrily toward the end of the runway and the water that lay beyond. A few feet before plowing off the edge the pilot planted a foot on one of the brakes and the plane spun around and pulled up to a flat spot that was obviously a parking space.

"Wasn't that a great landing?" he questioned, smiling directly at me. For a mo-

Outdoor Report

Governor Blanchard has placed a ban on all open burning in all of the Upper Peninsula and northern Lower Peninsula and certain counties in the Lower Peninsula. The emergency measure is due to the extreme drought conditions that exist in our state. To date, Michigan has lost over 10,000 acres of prime outdoor real estate to wildfires.

The recent stretch of hot weather has decreased the fishing pressure throughout the state. Fly fishermen have enjoyed one of the best mayfly hatches in many years, and the past weekend seemed to be the peak. The AuSable River system teemed with both mayflies and flyfishermen. The best fishing is after dark, with the hottest time usually occurring around midnight. Locally, Laker trout action was good off Grindstone City, Port Austin and Harbor Beach. Walleyes were hitting off Sebewaing, Sand Point and near Little and Big Charity Islands.

The Anglers of AuSable will be the host club for the Federation of Fly Fishers Great Lakes Conclave to be held July 22-24 at the Ralph MacMullan conference center in Roscommon. Speakers will include Leon Chandler of the Cortland Line Company, and DNR fish researchers who work on the South Branch. There will be clinics on outdoor writing, photography and fly fishing.

I felt naked, my frightened feelings must have been painted clearly across my face.

"Any landing you walk away from is great," I answered, stealing the line from some old WWII movie. He laughed and mumbled something about getting me before the trip was over and we both jumped out to unload the gear.

A fishing trip to Alaska had brought me face to face with one of the greatest bush pilots to fly across the tundra. Great, not because of his ability, which was obvious, but great because he had been doing it for 30 years without dinging a plane. One of the first things I learned about bush pilots is they never crash a plane, they only "ding it".

Doyle, the owner of the fishing lodge, was also our sole bush pilot for this trip. A cautious, knowledgeable ex-fireman, he was a wealth of information when it came to the thousands of questions that burst from my lips over the next several days. His flying was so good and landings so perfect that I even managed to relax and enjoy the scenery when we were airborne.

Doyle would keep me alert constantly to unique features in the, otherwise, bland landscape. He had eagle eyes when it came to spotting game several hundred feet below. We buzzed swans, coyotes, and even a grizzly, all so the passengers could get a better look. By the end of the week I was beginning to find Doyle an alright guy. Then it happened.

We had finished a hard day of fishing on one of the many rivers in the area, and were being ferried back to base camp in Doyle's Cessna. Since the plane only carried 3 passengers and there were 10 of us, one would make the last trip alone. On this occasion it was me.

Doyle taxied to the end of the runway and revved up the engine. He released the brake, pushed the throttle override and gunned the blue and white plane down the narrow strip of gravel. By now this was old hat so I laid back in the seat and was totally relaxed.

When the plane reached the necessary speed the lift of the wings pulled it gently from the ground. At that instant Doyle pushed the stick down and the plane banged into the runway.

In sheer panic I grabbed for the small handhold attached to my side of the cockpit. Doyle calmly pulled back on the stick and the plane lifted into the air.

"Gotcha!" he explained as he grabbed me by the knee.

He did, and his laughter filled the tiny cockpit all the way home

CASEVILLE RETIREMENT CLUB

A total of 84 members were present for the June 21 meeting of the Caseville Retirement Club at the American Legion Hall.

President Tom Beadle asked all to stand and greet their neighbors and then led in the Lord's Prayer before lunch.

The Pledge to the Flag opened the meeting, which was conducted by Vice President Henry Hill in the absence of President Tom Beadle.

There were 39 blood pressure readings taken by Rose Koenig and Marion Parent, assisted by Louise Gerrard and all were thanked by Hill.

Hill thanked Ceil Peyok and Esther Lehman for the "earlybird" goodies and those who donated to the Food Pantry.

Welcomed back was Geri Dominick. Due to the absence of the secretary, no birthdays or anniversaries were celebrated.

Andy Lakatos reported that July 12 is the last day to pay for the "Star of Detroit" trip and payment for the West Virginia trip starts Aug. 2. He also thanked Ray Gerrard for putting together the Saginaw Race Track Trip, which was very successful.

Muriel Bondy and Adaline Beadle are still patients in the Huron County Medical Care Facility and Florence Rake is recuperating at home.

Honored by Hill was Ed Kreig, club historian and photographer.

Andy Lakatos reported on sanitation problems that are taking place in Caseville with further discussions to take place in the future. He also reported on changes for seniors starting Jan. 1, 1989.

The meeting was adjourned.

ELKTON SENIOR CITIZENS

Chairman Mike Renn welcomed the Elkton Senior Citizens on Tuesday, June 21. He introduced guests Harold Rapson and Neil and Jean Smith, then Clayton Gemmill led the table prayer for the 49 people in attendance.

After lunch, "America" was sung and the Pledge to the Flag given. The Birthday Song was sung for Welthy Schadd. Della Trudgen read a poem from "Ideals" entitled "Summertime Rain." Group singing was led by the Gemmells. Minutes of the past meeting were read and approved.

A get-well card was signed for Harry Renn. It was noted that anyone interested in attending the all-woman play "Women," being staged in Flint in August may contact Emily Podlaskowski for tickets.

Next week's program speaker will be Marie Leipprandt.

Program Chairman Sherman Day introduced Mr. and Mrs. Neil Smith, who gave members a slide "tour" of the country Mali in Western Africa, which is mostly desert country. The Smiths say the temperature averages 105 degrees and high hot winds blow daily.

To the person wondering how to make friends when you're not wanted: all the local preachers here-

They probably have other opinions you would not like, if you did get to know them. Count your blessings and simply consider the source. Be happy. Ignore them. **/

I am wondering why the cops let the town run wild on a Friday night? That didn't seem to make much sense. **/

Why do so many parents let their kids watch R-rated movies on their VCRs at home? Do they let the kids pick them out, too? We hear about little kids seeing movies they shouldn't get near until they're grown up. It doesn't make sense. Don't the parents care? I won't let kids watch anything not suitable for them. Young people get enough bad ideas. If you want to bring home an adult movie, keep it under lock-and-key like you would a dirty book, or else kids will watch it. **/

The Northwest end of town are such a bunch of wimps not standing up for their rights, letting two people who don't pay taxes in town bully them around. Besides that no campers, trailers, etc., are supposed to be set up in Pigeon. What is going on? **/

I think it's time everybody quit griping about the so-called newcomers in the area. A town gets too inbred after a while and needs new blood for vitality. They pay the same taxes we do, and they obviously love the area as much as the "old-comers." or they wouldn't have moved here. I moved here nearly 10 years ago and I wasn't made to feel welcome until just a few years ago. The old saying may be true: "People in the city will accept you, but not help you. BANKSHOT BASKETBALL

BANKSHOT BASKETBALL is a new street game. Even with the impressive, imposing backboard structures, it's a challenging and spontaneous sport; you never need a reservation. It's your neighborhood game like schoolyard ringaleevio, stickball, the billiard parlor and the bowling alley. And as in all street games, BANKSHOT is constantly improving and evolving. You can compete against yourself or play against others. Your shooting strategy, and not your size, age or strength, will determine your skill at BANKSHOT.

16 STATION COURSE

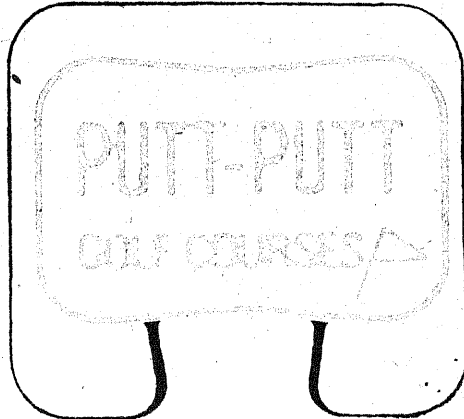

HOW IT WORKS: "Bankshot Basketball" is a non-contact, non-running and non-dribbling sport that relies on shooting accuracy, touch and concentration rather than on athletic ability or experience. The game utilizes the conventional basketball and rims, but the backboards are non-standard, requiring different strategies to score bankshots.
