Lend a helping hand

When everything seems to be going wrong, as it does right now, there’s no better place to turn than to the area’s many volunteer organizations. Whether you look to the Salvation Army, the Red Cross, Meals on Wheels, the Lake FFA chapter, or any of the thousands of local kids who make up the Boy Scouts or Girl Scouts, the support is there.

Now, the organization is looking for help in the most unlikely of places, and the people who need it most are the ones who are giving back. Meals on Wheels is one of the many volunteer groups that are always looking for help. The need is great, and the people who deliver meals need the help to do their job.

"It’s all about the people who give up their time and effort to help others," says Mary Jones, one of the leaders of Meals on Wheels. "They’re the ones who make it possible for us to continue our work."

If you’re interested in helping, there are many ways to get involved. Whether you volunteer as a driver or a helper, or just donate a little extra money, the support is needed and appreciated.

"We need your help," says Jones. "It doesn’t matter how much or how little. It’s all about making a difference in someone’s life."

For more information on how you can help, call Meals on Wheels at 555-1234.

FROM UNDER THE WILLOW

By Wanda Dieder

We can’t really do anything about the weather, can we?

The two distinct schools of thought concerning weather—whether or not the day will be sunny or rainy—are rarely found at odds with each other. Some people believe that the weather is inextricably linked to the sun, moon, and stars, while others believe that the weather is a result of natural forces such as wind and water. But no matter how you look at it, the weather is a force to be reckoned with.

The weather can affect our moods, our activities, and even our health. It can be a source of comfort or frustration, depending on how we perceive it. And yet, despite its impact on our lives, we have little control over the weather. We can’t stop it, change it, or even predict it accurately.

That doesn’t mean we can’t enjoy the weather, though. Whether it’s sunny or rainy, hot or cold, we can find ways to make the most of it. So next time you find yourself looking up at the sky, take a deep breath and enjoy the moment. After all, we can’t control the weather, but we can control our attitude towards it.

Ach obviously was the same, Mr. Lloyd. I was always around him and that little thing was out of this world.

So until we’re sure ABS is doing that, we run the risk that we do more harm than good on the fragile plants.

Recollected By-Go-By Days

By George Kow

Dear Editor:

Saturday I was in Adelphia and they were telling me that there were a lot of mice and rats in the area. I was thinking about the mice I have seen in my yard and was wondering if I should be concerned.

The mice I have seen in my yard are very thin and look very sick. They seem to be avoiding the areas where there is food, and they seem to be taking cover in the newly fallen leaves on the ground. I am not sure if they are coming into my yard to eat or if they are just looking for a place to rest.

I have noticed that the mice seem to be more active at night, and I have heard that they are more likely to come out at night to feed. I am not sure if this is true, but it is something that I have been noticing.

I would like to know if there is anything I can do to prevent the mice from coming into my yard. I do not want them to damage my plants or my garden. I would also like to know if there is anything I can do to keep them from eating my food.

Sincerely,

George Kow

McCarrol’s sister, who lives in Dearborn, said her brother was a very successful businessman and enjoyed giving back to the community.

The restaurant business was very successful, but ultimately, the decision was made to sell the business in order to focus on family and other interests.

McCarrol’s sister said she was very proud of her brother’s achievements and is looking forward to the next chapter in his life.

Weed wackers & power equipment

By ED HUTCHISON

Gardening in the South can turn a frustrated Tevin for the invention of the weed wacker and with it, the birth of an entire industry of helping us keep our lawns and gardens neat.

It was just 17 years ago when George Beale figured there had to be a better way to keep the grass from growing around the grate of his two big toads.

His answer was found in an amity popscicle, made with nylon tubing and mounted on a 3/8 inch diameter wooden otter. As the nylon tubing moved back and forth, weeds would slide under it and the wet soil would wash them away.

The device he called "a weed wacker" was soon patented and the industry was born. Today, it is estimated that there are over 100 million units of the device in use worldwide.

The original design of the weed wacker has evolved over the years with improvements in materials and design. Today, weed wackers are available in a variety of models, from simple hand-held units to more sophisticated models with adjustable settings for different types of grass and soil conditions.

The weed wacker has become a staple in many gardens and lawns, helping to keep the area free of weeds and maintaining a neat appearance.

GASOLINE OR ELECTRIC-Powered?

Since 1983, the trend has been to gas engines, according to Charles Hodge, a spokesman for Pou-Pou/Black-Eyed. Gas engines are quieter and cleaner than electrical models, making them a popular choice for lawn and garden equipment.

In 2010, however, electric-powered models began to gain popularity due to their lower cost and environmental benefits. Some models are even designed to work with solar or wind power, further reducing their carbon footprint.

The choice between a gasoline-powered model and an electric-powered model ultimately comes down to personal preference and the specific needs of the user. Gasoline-powered models may be more powerful and offer a wider range of tool options, but electric-powered models are often quieter and require less maintenance.

The technology behind weed wackers has improved significantly over the years, making them more efficient and effective at keeping lawns and gardens free of weeds.

Volunteers Aid Plant Of 190,000 Walleyes

The Castaway tipped to the right and the pontoon boat lifted off the water. The net was pulled out of the water onto the deck, where the man in charge of the operation pulled it into the ground. The fish were then sorted and counted. The operation was completed in about an hour and a half. The fish were then transferred to a truck and taken to a nearby fish farm.

The snow was falling and the temperature was dropping. The wind was howling. The trees were bent over, their branches clawing at the ground. The only sound was the howling wind. The man in charge of the operation pulled the net into the ground, where the fish were then sorted and counted. The operation was completed in about an hour and a half. The fish were then transferred to a truck and taken to a nearby fish farm.

Department of Natural Resources employees Rob Ziegler and Carrie Hiltunen, shown here at left, checked sizes of the young Walleye (P. americanus) members opened the pond's drain. After a 24-hour under the cloak of darkness, the Castaway's crew boated into the water and caught the fish by net. The fish were then transferred to a nearby fish farm.

BANKSHOT BASKETBALL is a new street game. Even with the impressive, imposing backboard structures, it's a challenging and spontaneous sport; you never need a reservation. It's your neighborhood game like schoolyard ringaleevio, stickball, the billiard parlor and the bowling alley. And as in all street games, BANKSHOT is constantly improving and evolving. You can compete against yourself or play against others. Your shooting strategy, and not your size, age or strength, will determine your skill at BANKSHOT.

HOW IT WORKS: "Bankshot Basketball" is a non-contact, non-running and non-dribbling sport that relies on shooting accuracy, touch and concentration rather than on athletic ability or experience. The game utilizes the conventional basketball and rims, but the backboards are non-standard, requiring different strategies to score bankshots.
