

As we see it editorially

This is a nice place to live, but it's hard to go elsewhere by train!

A national columnist with mid-Michigan roots recently hit the nail on its head when he talked about airplane and train travel. The point shouldn't be lost on people trying to stay ahead... or get ahead... of the rest of the world.

Stocks columnist and Lapeer native Bill Myers recently commented about a Wall Street Journal story, which told that high-priced airplane fares are forcing people to "take the train" instead. That may or may not be true, but the problem comes when you try to get from here to there via rail in this country.

Myers' column tells of a family member who wished to go to Florida from Michigan by train, instead of plane. Myers had taken that train trip himself, in years past. My, how times have changed!

Myers recalls you used to take the C & O south from his home to Detroit, catch the 11 p.m. train and stay on it until you saw palm trees 36 hours later. During the pre-World War II era, that's how you got from here to there.

Since then, he writes, a few detours have been added, as his family member and her daughter learned.

First, you don't go south — but you must travel west... to Chicago. There are north-south bound trains anymore, and the only manageable one starts in Chicago.

From there you reverse yourself and head east. East to Philadelphia, for the only true north-south, cold-to-warm, Midwest (or East) to Florida rail line. And, 24 hours-plus have elapsed. Myers remembers the 24-hour mark would have found you in Atlanta 40 or more years ago, not Philadelphia.

Now, as Day 2 begins, and as you await your connections, you'll get ready for another train trip. In all, it will take nearly three days to get from Michigan to Florida — half of a typical week's vacation for most folks.

There's more frustration in train travels, too, besides the obvious quadruple time commitment needed to accomplish your journey. A round-trip train ticket will cost about $700, compared with about $250 for round-trip air fare.

Longer time, harder (overnight) conditions and higher prices. Maybe that's why train travel over long distances just isn't possible anymore.

Some friends had similar thoughts in taking a bus ride to Florida. The investigation found a bus ticket to cost about as much as an airline ticket, but the time commitment needed was again much greater than by plane. Where's the advantage in all this?

Our neighbor to the north has a train system to be envied. Canadian trains run often, on time, run well, are clean and are very affordable. They're used widely, but are also subsidized by its federal government.

Perhaps we gained too much from the post-World War II automotive "explosion." The freedoms we gained came at the expense of passenger trains. Even now, train tracks are being cut back, curtailed, sold and used less — even though they're very efficient, safe, dependable and historic.

But don't try to catch a train to Florida. You can't get there from here.

Defusing a sour situation

It could have been a sour situation. I boarded a Northwest jet bound for Detroit from Orlando and found a young woman already in my seat (well, I thought it was my seat!). It turned out the airline had also told her that 15-C was her seat.

So began our little song and dance. I waited in the aisle while a flight attendant checked tickets. "It's definitely your seat," I was told. I plopped into 15-C, but not with the intention of staying since I had a feeling about the dilemma. The woman went along with the flight attendant and returned to sit a row ahead.

"She's wrong. It really is my seat," she told me in a somewhat agitated tone when she returned.

We weren't the only ones playing the little game, as we found out when the announcement came.

"Ladies and gentlemen, we're sorry, but we seem to have assigned some of you to the same seat. Since we need to be leaving, would you please find an available seat and be settled so we can take off."

This airline was definitely counting on goodwill, which is sometimes in short supply on overloaded aircraft late in the day!

I had requested an aisle seat so my knitting wouldn't bother the person next to me and so that I could stretch my legs a bit. But that was beside the point in this situation. "I'll be glad to move over and take this center seat," I told the young woman.

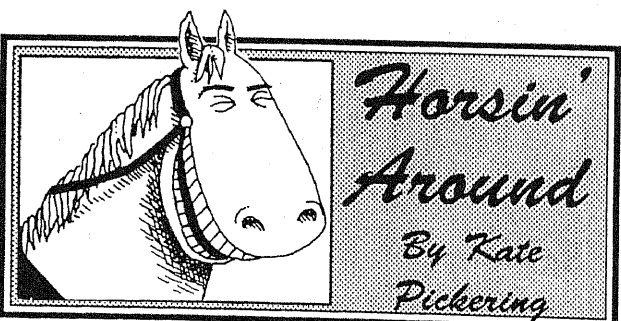

We resettled, side by side, and kept up our bantering about the airline and the lousy service. The seat subject was soon exhausted as I brought out my knitting which, fortunately, was on circular needles which take less space.

"Oh, you knit! So does my mother. Can I see what you're doing?"

We spent much of the rest of the flight getting acquainted. She was a recent MSU grad who worked for an engineering firm and was traveling a lot. She'd enjoyed an extended stay in Florida, where she met her mother for the weekend. Her roots were in the same Chicago area suburbs where I had attended college and taught school. And, she had good reason to request the aisle seat. "I tend to feel claustrophobic on airplanes and that's why I requested an aisle seat," she said.

We parted with goodwill and best wishes for each other's work and for the week ahead. She had made note of the book I was using as a knitting guide ("I'll bet my Mom would knit me a sweater like that!" she said, as she paged through it. And I felt as though we'd both turned what could have been a sour situation into a pleasant time.

Most of the time, that's the way traveling goes. You can count on the goodwill of others, you meet interesting people and you have interesting experiences!

Horsin' Around

ST. VALENTINE WAS SINGLE

When you're single, sometimes Valentine's Day can have an almost "Jacket and Tie Required" feeling about it. You know - like when you go casually dressed to an elite restaurant and you're stopped cold at the door by that sign. Others with jackets and ties go whizzing by, but you must gaily, drinking and dining on haute cuisine.

Flowers arrive at work for your friends from their "significant others," and boxes of candy in stunningly decorated and colored heart shaped boxes. You, on the other hand, wait a week 'til they're half price, and then go buy a small, stale one for yourself.

Racks and row of cards are available, and you rifle through, choosing those for "Friends," "Mom and Dad," "Grandma" and "Someone Nice To Work With," but you skip over the really big, opulent lace & silk "To My Husband" "With Love To My Lover" and "Dearest" cards.

All the restaurants feature dinner specials for two with heart shaped prime rib and a complimentary bottle of champagne. You, on the other hand, sulk in front of the TV with your one true love, Sara Lee.

You scan the love-liners in the local paper, skimming past "To Pookey From Mucky" and "Roses Are Red, Violets Are Blue," hoping to see perhaps your own nick-name, along with a mushy sentiment from a secret admirer... but you're not "Muffin Head" or "Lumpy" or "Electric Lover" and you turn the page to the obituaries to see if maybe the problem is that you're dead and no one told you yet!

But just because at the moment you don't have a "significant other," or even if you never do, this does not diminish or invalidate any love you feel as a human. If you love your mom & dad, a child, a pet (like a horse), or a plant - if you love God or a goldfish or a favorite record. If you love sunshine or "The Cosby Show" - if you had a crush on someone in high school, or someone had one on you - then this day is for you too! If you're a widow or widower, a divorcee, confirmed bachelor or an old spinster like me, you can still celebrate February 14th in your heart, because as Whitney Houston sings —

"The greatest love of all is easy to achieve... learning to love yourself - that is the greatest love of all..." —and maybe the greatest challenge.

PER-TON BEET PRICES ARE UP

Thumb farmers feared their sugar beets and profits would evaporate in the two-month string of rainless days last summer. But crop exports say a 14% drop in production has raised the price growers are being paid for beets that beat the heat.

The 1988 crop is worth more than $78 million, down from the 1987 total of $91.26 million paid to farmers. But, the price per-ton is now $34 for the beets, up $3 from 1987. Total figures at Michigan Sugar Company, one of the two beet processing companies in the state, show about 1.5 million tons of beets are worth $50.5 million this year, says Vice President David Roche. The company's 1987 crop was valued at $54.8 million.

JORDAN TO BUILD IN CASS CITY

Jordan College plans to construct a new educational building and move from its rural Bad Axe campus to the new site in Cass City. Final plans are still being negotiated, but about 30 Cass City area residents have individually pledge up to $10,000 each to gather the $250,000 needed to bring the college to the Tuscola County community.

Lambert Althaver, chairman of the project for the Cass City Chamber of Commerce, says the college will pay $110,000 as part of a down payment to help the college secure financing for the proposed $450,000 building.

Located at the corner of Main and Ale Streets, the 14,000-sq. ft. structure will be able to house 350 full-time students or 500 part-timers. Jordan College now has about 200 part-time students on its Rescue campus, southwest of Bad Axe.

The college offers an Associate of Arts degree but mostly assists in career-oriented courses, President Lexie Coxon points out. Jordan College, based in Cedar Springs, has seven Michigan campuses.

POLICE BLOTTER NEWS

Sebewaing Police are investigating a Feb. 6 reported rape, which occurred in a Sebewaing house and was reported about 5:30 a.m. The victim is a Huron County resident, and the investigation is continuing, police say.

A Detroit area woman lost $250 from her wallet and a calculator Feb. 4 while at a Caseville area lounge. Tamarah Buchbinder said the items were taken from her purse between midnight and 2 a.m., when she noticed they were missing, she told sheriff's deputies.

About $15,000 to $20,000 in damages were reported from a wood burner fire at the Elwood Smith home on Sand Road, southwest of Caseville, about 5:30 p.m. Feb. 6. Smith had left the house with the wood burner full and operating, and a relative discovered the fire about half an hour later. Caseville Firemen finished extinguishing the fire on the south end of the house, around the fireplace, after neighbors and the relative had kept the fire controlled until help arrived.

Caseville students win essay contest

Three students from Caseville Public School have been named local winners in the 20th Annual "America & Me" Essay Contest, sponsored by Farm Bureau Insurance.

The three students, who earned first, second and third place awards, respectively, for their school, include Christopher Stahl, Robert Ruiz de Castilla and Shawn Nicholson.

All three received award certificates for their achievement. As the school's first place winner, Stahl's name will be engraved on a plaque for permanent display in the school.

His essay also advances to state level competition, from which the top 10 essays in Michigan will be selected. The top 10 state winners, who will be announced in May, will receive plaques and U.S. Savings Bonds valued from $500 to $1,000. In addition, the top 10 essayists will be honored at a banquet in Lansing and at a meeting with Michigan's top governmental leaders in late May.

A team of finalist judges including Gov. James Blanchard and Lt. Gov. Martha Griffiths will determine the top statewide winners. Several thousand eighth grade students from almost 500 Michigan schools participated in the 1988-89 contest, which explores the theme, "My Dream For America and How Will Help Make It Come True."

MATURE READERS
Today's retirement systems are a waste of vast wisdom and energies of mature people. Approaching age 65? Retirement? Children gone and grown? You can't change these facts of life, but you CAN change yourself and your attitudes in ways that will make being older more rewarding and enjoyable.

Of America's 12 million widowed people, women outnumber men 5 to 1. Men remarry so fast that once they are remarried they are no longer considered widowers. The ratio of new widows to new widowers is 3 to 2.

The Pigeon District Library announces a number of books to help on most subjects, including:

"Hanging in There" Schwed, "The Retirement Threat" Lamb, "It Takes a Long Time to Become Young" Kanin, "Sunbelt Retirement Vol. 1," "States East of the Mississippi River," "Life's Second Half" and "The Pleasures of Aging" Ellison;

"A Lawyer's Advice to Retirees" Dunn, "Second Wife/Second Best" Walker, "Getting Married Again" Stewart and "The Stroke Fact Book" Foley, plus "The Senior Citizens' Handbook" Stokell and "The Heart Attack Survival Manual" Seymour.

Also available at the Pigeon District Library is a large print book section and the news magazine for mature readers "Senior Voice."

A MORNING IN THE LIFE OF A QUILTER
I get out of bed a little faster this morning. Today is an extra busy day—it's the day the Quilting Guild meets at the Pigeon District Library. I'll take my sheets off the bed and put them in the washer. I can't let my housework slide too much.

I'll just take a peek at the quilt in the frames. I do want to finish quilting that this week so I can get my Country Bride quilt in. I'll just finish that one line. Oh my, where did that half hour go?

John will be in for breakfast and he'll wonder why it isn't ready. I'll quickly put the oatmeal on the stove and get the frying pan heating. I must put the sheets in the dryer.

Back to the oatmeal and eggs... John wonders why the oatmeal is lumpy and the egg are crusty on the bottom. Why not? This is quilting day at the library!

I just made it in time for the Quilt Guild with my fabrics and patterns in tow. These two hours of talking, dreaming and sharing of all the quilts we're going to make someday are worth all the effort to get there.

Oh, I hear the fire whistle blowing... I hope my burner was turned off under the oatmeal!

(Dedicated to Ann Marie Clabusch, who has inspired the ladies in the Quilting Guild)

'Good news' about beans coming at MBSA meet Wednesday

John Kohr, chief executive officer of the Cooperative Elevator Company, will preside at the meeting of the Michigan Bean Shippers Association on Wednesday, Feb. 22 in Frankenmuth.

Nutritional Foundation based in Lexington, Ky., will profile the role of dry beans in the human diet and outline the clinically proven attributes of bean consumption to healthy living. Research findings in recent years have marked dry beans as one of the principal contributors of fiber to the human diet. Increased fiber consumption is linked directly to the lowering of cholesterol levels and the reduced instances of some forms of cancer. Many of the findings of the HCF Foundation have been collaborated by the American Cancer Research Institute.

Kohr will also, chair the honors program scheduled to be held to laud recently-retired MSU dry bean plant breeder Dr. M. Wayne Adams. Dr. Adams spent nearly three decades with MSU's Crop and Soil Science Department and is credited with the development and release of nearly 20 different varieties of dry bean seed stocks during his career at MSU. Adams will receive the MBSA's Distinguished Service to Agriculture Award during the luncheon program to be held in his honor.

The prospect of legislative assistance for a state-wide research program designed to adapt Pinto and Great Northern beans to Michigan conditions will be reported on by Rep. Thomas Hickner (Bay City), chairman of the House Agriculture Committee.

The Michigan Bean Shippers Association has documented the need for the introduction of these two dry bean products in Michigan. Conservative estimates compiled by the MBSA suggest that Michigan producers could market one million cwt. of Pinto beans and in excess of 500,000 cwt. of Great Northern beans to domestic and world markets, if the seed development research expected to be conducted at MSU proves successful. These new agricultural products would generate $30 to $45 million in farm income and an estimated additional $4 to $6 million in income for the state's elevator industry.

Postal inspectors warn of scams

The U.S. Postal Inspection Service has warned the public about the increasing number of "boiler room" scams that use the telephone to pitch a variety of products, usually attached to a "free gift" gimmick, according to Pigeon Postmaster Martin Thiel.

Chief Postal Inspector Charles R. Clauson says the bogus companies flood post offices with computerized mailings notifying people "they've won a prize," usually after offering for sale everything from vitamins to office supplies. "The operators then follow-up with high-pressure telemarketing," Clauson says, "usually asking for money or a credit card number to cover shipping charges."

Clauson says the best way to defend against the scams is to "check out the company and call them back -- without giving your credit card number or any money -- and if still suspicious, get in touch with a postal inspector through the nearest post office."

Chief Inspector Clauson says, "The telephone boiler rooms have been concentrated in certain areas of the country but the victims come from all over."

TRUE LOVE IS MUCH MORE THAN CARDS ON VALENTINE'S DAY

In just about a week from now There'll be a special day For which we all have made a vow To send what will portray How much we love someone we know, In words that will combine With lacy hearts and cupid's bow In red and white design. But love extends beyond a card For someone else to read; It's meant to show our deep regard

For helping those in need. Our Bible lessons underscore Their messages divine: That love is infinitely more Than just a Valentine.

— Gloria Nowak

They do not love that do not show their love. — William Shakespeare

Financial Focus

Goals and Objectives Article V

Reported by PATRICK ESSIAN

Present investment decisions should be influenced by our future needs.

There is a direct relationship between the amount of money we wish to accumulate and the number of years we wish to accumulate it.

To illustrate, let's assume you wish to accumulate a $12,000 college education fund for your newborn child. You believe the child will enter college in 20 years, and you're expecting an annual rate of return of 12%. To reach this goal, you'll have to invest $12.13 per month.

If you wait five years — now you have only 15 months to meet your goal — you'll have to invest $24.02 per month, and if you procrastinate another 10 years, you'll have to invest $146.93 per month to achieve the same dollar goal.

So you see, time can be a real asset in planning for our children's education or our retirement — if we don't let it slip away! The more time we have, the fewer dollars we need.

Advice we receive on investments should be weighed in relation to the source. I'm reminded of the cartoon — two hobos sitting on a park bench discussing their investment strategy. I tend to discount advice from the never-do-wells or one stands to benefit strongly on the advice he or she distributes.

Investing, as we've mentioned before, should not be based on hot tips or hunches. When you select a broker or adviser, ask for his or her philosophy on investing — get to know the broker or adviser you choose.

Once you trust your broker, take him or her into your complete confidence and explain in detail your goals and resources. The more your adviser or broker knows you and what you want, the better he or she will be able to serve you.

Remember what we've said before — it's your money, so ask questions and get answers! Don't be shy!

Investment Term of the Week: Broker — an agent who handles the public's orders to buy and sell securities, commodities or other property. For this service, a commission is charged.

No pride lost in asking for bed

DEAR MR. ROSS:

I've written you over and over again about a bed. One that's not on the floor and one without wire that pokes through into our bones.

When I say "our" I'm talking about me and my three daughters. I'm not asking for new bedroom furniture — not that I don't need it — only a bed. At present, three of us sleep at the top of the mattress and one sleeps across the bottom.

It seems so silly to get upset with you for not buying us a bed. It's not like you'll be sleeping in it. Anyways, thanks for helping all the people you feel need your help. You will be rewarded for your many kind acts, even if you can't help everyone. Well, I won't write again. You see, I've got some pride, just no money. — Ms. B.W., Savannah, Ga.

DEAR MS. W.: I'm glad you've got some pride because pride is important — until it stands in your way. The only pride you lost in asking me to buy you a bed, whether you asked once or 10 times, is false pride.

However, had you offered to share that bed in order to get it, that would have been a loss of pride. My check for a new bed is on the way. — $$$$$$$$$$

DEAR MR. ROSS: I think you're one of the cruelest people I've heard about. How dare you publicize giving away your money! I've written you once, I've written 20 times asking you to pay for a college education for each of my three children.

Well, I'm no fool. I interpret your silence toward my request as a direct refusal, even though you've never stated it in as many words.

Just who do you think you are passing judgment on who is deserving of your almighty dollars? I'm not going to close this letter like you other readers do — wishing you a place in heaven. Heck no, pal. I hope you go straight down. — Mr. A.A.H., Detroit.

DEAR MR. H.: Two observations: First, you're one brick short of a full load if you think I would even consider funding all your children's college educations.

Second, you're bitter about something and bitterness will consume a person. If I were you, I'd lighten up before being eaten alive! — $$$$$$$$$$

DEAR MR. ROSS: Our daughter, five years old, sleeps with her mother and I in a cold basement. I hear her breathing hard in her sleep, knowing another blanket will not make her warm. As a father, my heart aches in financial need. — Mr. K.A., Philadelphia, PA.

DEAR A.: Sometimes the simplest of requests are heard the loudest. My check is on the way to buy a portable electric heater. And because electricity is no longer penny cheap, I've included some extra to soak up the added costs in your electric bill. — $$$$$$$$$$

DEAR MR. ROSS: I'm writing because I want to thank you. I think it is very nice that you give away your money to people who really need it.

I would like you to print

my letter because I would like your readers to think about this: If they were millionaires who had more money than they needed, how would they spend their money?

I'm only eight years old, but when I grow up, I hope I'm just like you, Mr. Ross! — Miss R.B., Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

DEAR MISS R.B. and READERS:

Many of you write and state if you were millionaires, you'd spend your money the same way I do. What about the rest of you?

I'm offering $100 for any letter (200 words or less) I print in this column which answers the question, "If you were a millionaire, how would you spend your money?" Write your response in care of "MILLIONAIRE," P.O. Box 23500, Minneapolis, MN. 55423.

To you, Miss R.B., your $100 is in the mail. — $$$$$$$$$$
