Who is residing in the Huron County Jail?

By MARK RUMMEL

Do you know who's residing in the Huron County Jail at any given time, say today? Do you know how many people are, what they're serving time for, and how long they're to be incarcerated?

A glimpse at Huron County's only confinement facility shows it's a busy center of law and order. And, as Sheriff Mike Gage explains, the County Jail is undergoing many improvements at this time.

ADDITIONAL CHARGES: When Sheriff Gage took office on Jan. 1, the jail was certified for 43 beds — and 17 inmates resided there. In early February, the Sheriff's negotiations with the Michigan Department of Corrections paid off, and 11 beds which previously had been removed were restored, bringing jail capacity to 54 persons.

Sheriff Gage's staff offered the available space to house "out-county" minimum-security prisoners, to help ease jail crowding in Port Huron and the greater Detroit area. A daily rate of $40 per inmate, the Sheriff realized the unused beds could produce revenue for Huron County, to offset expenses.

By March, several Sheriff's Department offices were restructured to assure proper programming to the Sheriff's living quarters adjacent to the jail at Court and S. Heilman Streets in Bad Axe. Sheriff Gage negotiated 11 additional beds, bringing maximum current capacity to 65 persons. Moving of office supplies and interior remodeling area was done with inmate labor, he adds.

Efforts are underway to bring the entire building up to state standards, and the Sheriff has plans for even more renovations — resulting in even more capacity in the future.

"The County Board of Commissioners were extremely cooperative in working with me on this project, to achieve this goal on a timely manner," Sheriff Gage says of the expansion project. "The Board has liked the idea of earning additional revenues, and taxpayers I've talked to also approve it."

REVENUE GROWTH: From about $2,600 in income during the first month of making space available to "out-county" inmates, the amount has grown dramatically. In October, more than $40,000 was earned because other counties need the space to house prisoners — and because Huron County has the room.

Next year, St. Clair County plans to rent 20 beds all year long at a reduced price of $33 per day, to generate more than $240,000. "The pleasant side of this is we're able to pay for needed improvements and have some money left over for the county's general fund," Sheriff Gage notes. Plus, additional prisoners are being supervised for the current staff plus only two parole officers, he says.

A down side is the present jail administrator, eight full-time parole officers and the two parole officers won't be sufficient for handling additional inmates, due to state guidelines. But again, the Sheriff notes, revenues are greater than the added expenses.

WHO'S IN JAIL TODAY? As of this past week, 18 Huron County inmates are incarcerated for periods of few days to one year. Another 41 "out-county" prisoners are housed there, and one person is assigned to Huron County by the state Department of Corrections, for a total of 62 prisoners. Plus, three persons make regular contacts with the jail but are on work-release programs. They pay $10 per day "sleep charge" to the county.

Persons in the County Jail come from most towns in Huron County, as well as Inlet, Grose Pointe Farms, Grose Pointe Woods, Westlawn, Hamtrach, Dearborn and the Port Huron Area. Sheriff Gage credits his predecessor, Former Sheriff Richard Stokan, with beginning a good working relationship with St. Clair County. He's added to the arrangement "because it leaves fewer empty beds." It would be foolish not to use them," Sheriff Gage notes.

Statewide standards call for one jail bed per 1,000 population, meaning Huron County should plan on 36 beds for its 36,000 population. But, only 22 persons are jailed or on work-release programs leaving many beds to be "shared." Some studies say it costs $37 a day to house prisoners, but Sheriff Gage says local costs are less than $28.

Plus, the persons imprisoned here are for "minimum-security" crimes such as larcenies, all minor, probation violations, drunken driving and others. "They send us what we feel are more the cream of the crop," he says.

MORE IN FUTURE: Persons serving time in county jails have sentences of one year or less, guidelines say it...
Co-op tells 'the bean story' during MSU's AutumnFest

The Cooperative Storage Company wanted the world to know about its role in the state's agricultural economy. That was the main reason eight representatives from the company, plus 1960 Michigan State University alumni, attended the AutumnFest. The Company, based in Midland, was one of the two largest grain elevators in the state, and one of the largest processors of grains in the world. The company's representatives included Alice Barnard, president, and D. W. Munson, vice president.

The event was held on the university campus, with the help of the MSU Student Body and the MSU Alumni Association. The company's representatives were joined by representatives from other companies, including the Michigan Farm Bureau, the Michigan State University Agricultural Experiment Station, and the Michigan State University Cooperative Extension Service.

The event was a success, with thousands of people attending and learning about the company's role in the state's agricultural economy. The company's representatives were able to answer questions and provide information about the company's products and services.

The event was also a great opportunity for the company to showcase its products and services to the public. The company's representatives were able to demonstrate the company's products and services, and to answer questions about the company's future plans.

Overall, the event was a great success, and the company was able to achieve its goal of raising awareness about its role in the state's agricultural economy. The company's representatives were able to answer questions and provide information about the company's products and services, and to demonstrate the company's products and services to the public.

Putting it all in perspective

People are beautiful. That’s what I’m experiencing this third week after being shook up in the Northern California Earthquake. Perspective can mean so many different things and because of the earthquake, I’m seeing things in a different way. I have a new appreciation for my family and friends. I have a new appreciation for my health. I have a new appreciation for the small things in life, which is also a new appreciation for my college days. And I have a new appreciation for the smell of the ocean. People are beautiful.

It’s been interesting to see how the people around me have been reacting to the earthquake. Some people have been completely calm and collected. Others have been completely overwhelmed. But one thing is for sure, everyone has been very supportive of each other. People have been helping each other in any way they can. It’s been wonderful to see.

One day a year we have the opportunity to reflect on those who have lost their lives in America, as well as those who have been willing to do so in the intervening 70-plus years since Armistice Day joined the Fourth of July, Memorial Day and any other observances.

Can we ever develop a moment in silent thought and prayer, to consider just how fortunate we are, having what we have, and enjoying the many blessings bestowed upon us? This is the day to say, "Thank you."

HUNTER PAGE

Ever since I was a little girl, I had a tremendous fear of the unknown. It was a feeling that was always with me, no matter how much I tried to shake it off. But for most of us, it was a feeling that we learned to live with.

Women and men are equally afraid of the unknown. We all fear the unknown. And this is why we have traditions. They help us to cope with the unknown. They help us to see that there is order in the universe. That there is a beginning and an end.

Hunting, for example, helps to bring us closer to the unknown. It is a way of connecting with the forces of nature. It is a way of learning about the world around us. It is a way of understanding that we are all connected.

And the unknown is a good thing. It helps us to stay humble and to recognize that we are not the only ones who are here. It helps us to see that we are all part of something much larger than ourselves.

And that is why we have traditions. They help us to cope with the unknown. They help us to see that there is order in the universe. That there is a beginning and an end.

This is the day to say, "Thank you."

DEAR EDITOR

Halloween is over and I don’t even want to think about it happened by the next month.

When I was young, the thought of Halloween always brought a smile to my face. And this year, I was no exception. I was so excited to see all the adorable children in their costumes, asking for candy and treats.

Sure, there may have been some bumps along the way, but overall, it was a great day. I hope everyone had as much fun as I did.

Wishing you all a happy and healthy Halloween.

Sincerely,

Dear Editor:

I was wondering if you could please help me with a problem I am having. I have a friend who is having a hard time with school and I am worried about her.

Could you possibly give me some advice on how to help her out?

Thank you very much.

DEAR EDITOR

Thank you for the opportunity to write to you. I am a student at XYZ University and I am concerned about the rising costs of textbooks. I understand that the cost of textbooks can be quite high, especially for students who are already facing other financial pressures.

As a student, I have found that many textbooks are not available online or in accessible formats. This can make it difficult for me to access the materials I need to succeed in my courses.

I would like to propose the idea of a textbook lending library on campus. This could be a student-run initiative that would allow students to borrow textbooks from each other, reducing the financial burden of textbook costs.

I believe that this would be a valuable resource for students and I hope that you will consider this proposal. Thank you for your time and attention.

Sincerely,

DEAR EDITOR

I am a parent of a child in the XYZ school district. I wanted to express my concern about the recent increase in the number of school shootings.

As a parent, I want to ensure that my child is safe at school. I have heard about the steps that the school district is taking to improve safety, but I am still worried.

I would like to suggest that we have a town hall meeting to discuss this issue further. I believe that this would be an opportunity for parents, students, and school officials to come together to address this concern.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Two more wins for Lady Lakers in TBA race

By AMY HEIDEN

Only two more games remain in the 1989 girls' basketball season, two more that the Lady Lakers will wish to see at the end of the year.

MISSOURI-

Two Lady Lakers are still strong and demanding, but they will be without two key players this week.

One is Brittany Tumlinson, who is still struggling with the flu, but will be ready to go.

The other is Sallie Williams, who is out with a sprained ankle.

Caseville golfers travel to State Finals

By KATHY MEYER

The Caseville High School golf team traveled to Lansing to play in the Class C golf tournament last week.

The team included six players, four of whom were in the top 10 finishers.

Caseville finished 13th overall, but the team's lowest score was 105.

5 Lakers named to All-Area Team

Five Lakehust High School players were recently named to the All-Area team.

Senior Brian Butters was named to the First Team, while junior Matt Stoddard, senior David Atkinson, and junior Tim Atkinson were named to the Second Team.

Student/athletes work together to 'buck up'

By AMY HEIDEN

A group of student/athletes at Lakehust High School have started a program to help their fellow students buck up.

The program, called the "Buck Up" program, is designed to help students feel more comfortable and confident in their own skin.

Dinosaurs once roamed the earth, but only in the American Museum of Natural History’s latest dinosaur exhibit can they now be seen again. The exhibit, “Dinosaurs,” opens Nov. 16 at the museum and runs through Jan. 16.

The exhibit features more than 50 life-sized models of dinosaur species, including T-Rex, Triceratops, and Brontosaurus. Visitors can also see a replica of a dinosaur egg laying and a fossil dig station where they can try their hand at uncovering dinosaur bones.

The exhibit is open daily, except holidays, from 10 a.m. to 5:45 p.m. Admission is $10 for adults, $8 for seniors, and $6 for children.

POTATOES ARE TOP BUY IN NOVEMBER

BY GLADYS WEBER

Potatoes are a top buy in November, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The agency recommends buying a variety of potatoes to stretch your budget and satisfy different tastes.

Choose from red, white and yellow skins, and find them in all shapes and sizes. Use them for baking, boiling, mashing or frying.

Potato prices are expected to be lower in November than in previous months.

Visit your local supermarket or farmers’ market to find the best deal on potatoes.

NAME THAT FARM ... WIN A PRIZE ...

Tell us whose farm this is... and we'll draw one name from the entries for a one-year subscription to the Progress-Advance for you or the person of your choice.

AND... just to make the contest a little more competitive... we be advised that this shows the farm AS IT WAS around the Middle 1950's if So, you can name the farm that is not pictured today, or even if you just locate the farm it would count toward your prize.

Remembering Whenehh...

This series of serial photos is about 30 years old, but the pictures have never been seen by anyone except staff of the newspaper. You would be amazed how these farms and barns have changed in decades. Some old houses have been taken down and new ones built. Many farms have new owners, perhaps their children, or even grandchildren are living there now. Almost all of them have had fewer buildings today than they had in the 50’s. In some cases you’ll notice that fields are larger today than ever. Roads are better today. Some trees have been cut down, all of them have grown. On some farms, hogs of cows are seen in the barnyards or in a adjoining pastures or orchards.

These oldtime pictures will prove a genuine history book of changes in farming during the past decades.

The Progress-Advance is no more acquainted with the names of the farms than the readers, as they were "that" by Bill Hardinbrook and his pilot flying from town to town, and farm to farm. So put your thinking cap, then, 453-2331 or deliver or mail your answer to our office. Winning entry will be drawn at the close of business Friday from all correct entries received. Decision of judges is final.

Roses are red

By ED HUTCHINSON

DO apply winter protection and there’s a chance of having bush, boxwood and evergreen damage to stems and branches. Be sure to protect bottom portions of the plant as well as the crown area.

Ed’s tip: Points of interest: There’s a group of Midealers meeting 11 a.m. today at 927 "The Shop."

Another way of protecting these areas is using plastic bags slipped over the plants, but remember to keep them from touching the soil. It’s a good idea to keep these clean and replace them each year.

ANOTHER way of protecting these areas is using plastic bags slipped over the plants. Be sure to keep them from touching the soil. It’s a good idea to keep these clean and replace them each year.

There are many varieties of these plants, some with ground cover or where they can remain undisturbed. Many of these are low maintenance bushes and shrubs, and some need even more care and attention. Others like the garden with children and pets.
