Knock, knock ... It's your Census taker!

By Amy Neiden

By now, everyone knows the U.S. Census is underway, as the government attempts to count every person in the United States. The Census Bureau estimates that the country’s population is over 327 million, meaning the number of heads of household is also estimated at about that many. The Census Bureau estimates that the average household size is 2.5 persons, and that an estimated 25% of the population is not a native of the country.

The Census Bureau estimates that the average household size is 2.5 persons, and that an estimated 25% of the population is not a native of the country.

Some facts to consider:
- The Census Bureau estimates that the country’s population is over 327 million, meaning the number of heads of household is also estimated at about that many.
- An estimated 25% of the population is not a native of the country.
- The average household size is 2.5 persons.

So why is the Census important?
The Census is used to distribute federal funds to states and communities. It helps determine the number of seats each state has in the U.S. House of Representatives. It also helps determine how many federal dollars are distributed to each state. The Census can also help determine if areas are eligible for federal grants.
