I am a paralegal. The main reason for me being here today is to testify about the legal aspects of the case. I've been involved in similar cases in the past, and I believe my expertise will be valuable. I am prepared to answer any questions that the panel may have.

The case involves a dispute over a contract for the sale of goods. The plaintiff claims that the defendant breached the contract by failing to deliver the goods as specified. The defendant, on the other hand, argues that the plaintiff failed to make timely payments, thereby obligating the defendant to cancel the order.

In my opinion, the contract is clear and unambiguous. The terms of the contract are well-documented, and there is no evidence of fraud or duress. The plaintiff's failure to make timely payments is not excused by any circumstances that prevent performance. Therefore, the defendant's decision to cancel the order was justified.

I ask that the panel consider the evidence presented and reach a decision based on the law and the facts of this case. Thank you for your attention.

AIDS prevention her top priority

By AMY HEIDEN

Statisticians say that within three years, every person in the United States will know someone who has been touched by AIDS. In a year’s time, a third of America will be contaminated by the virus. And by 1995, everyone will be touched by AIDS.

And here in Huron and Sandusky Counties, Huron AIDS Coordinator Judi Clark is working to educate people about the disease. Her goal is twofold: educate people about AIDS and its prevention and find opportunities for those affected by the disease.

Clark is the AIDS Coordinator for the Huron and Sandusky Health Departments. She has been working in the two counties since 1988. In her position, she is the main point of contact and information for all people in the area. Clark said she has been known to call patients in the middle of the night if there is an emergency.

Clark said the two main goals of her position are to inform people about the disease and to provide as much support as possible.

Richard E. Funder of Caseville, an advisor who helped bring in 100 percent of funds for the new $5.1 million school, has received the Michigan Association of School Boards Lifetime Service Award. The award, which recognizes outstanding service in the field of education, was presented to Funder at the recent school board meeting.

Funder has been an educator for 58 years and has been a member of the Caseville School Board for 17 years. He has served as the school board’s president for six years and has been a member of the Michigan Association of School Boards for 14 years. He has also served as the school district’s superintendent, principal, and teacher.

Funder has been a strong advocate for education and has worked tirelessly to ensure that Caseville students receive the best possible education. He has been a driving force behind the construction of the new school and has been a key figure in the school district’s efforts to improve its facilities and services.

Funder has received numerous awards and recognitions for his work in education, including the Michigan Association of School Boards Lifetime Service Award. He has also been recognized by the Michigan Association of School Boards, the Michigan Association of School Administrators, and the Michigan Association of School Boards.

Funder’s dedication to education and his commitment to improving the lives of students and teachers in Caseville is truly inspiring. He is a true leader in the field of education and his work will continue to have a positive impact on the lives of students for years to come.
'In same boat' in Stockholm, Sweden!

By SALLY RUMMEL

Whenever you have shared thoughts and experiences with another person, have you ever used the expression “being in the same boat”? For Wilbur R. Maust of Waterloo, Ont., a native of Pigeon, he “was in the same boat” with a fellow traveler to the World Symposium of Choral Music in Stockholm, Sweden last August.

On sabatical from Conrad Grebel College at the University of Waterloo, Ont., where he is professor of music and chairman of the music department, Maust was one of 1000 choral conductors from around the world to attend the nine-day event, which also included four days in Tallin, Estonia and Helsinki, Finland.

On the first morning of the symposium, Maust was preparing to leave the ship called the “Gustaf Af Klint,” a young man approached him on board and asked him if he knew how to get to the Symposium. As they started their 20-minute walk to the Conference Center, they began to introduce themselves. His new acquaintance said he had just arrived by overnight ship from Finland where he was visiting friends, but that he came from Washington D.C., where he is a professor and chairman of the Music Department at Washington Bible College.

Returning some personal information, Maust told him he was also from the U.S. and in fact, from Michigan. “Really?” said his acquaintance. “I also came from Michigan.” He then inquired more specifically about where Maust was from and he told him, “I come from Huron County.” “That’s interesting,” his new friend said. “I’m from Huron County, too. What town are you from?” “I told him I grew up on a farm near Bay Port and that my parents lived in Pigeon after they retired. It turned out that he, too, came from a farm on Caseville Road a few miles south of Pigeon and the two farms were not more than four miles apart. His new friend turned out to be Dale Voelker, son of Don and Viola Voelker of Pigeon. Maust is the son of Richard and Elizabeth Maust and both “natives” have relatives in the Pigeon area.

Their introductions continued as Voelker shared that he went to Northwestern for his music doctorate, where he studied Church Music and Organ. Maust told him he went to Indiana University, where he took a music doctorate in Music History and Voice.

The two men, who shared such a powerful bond of music, had never met in Michigan, but found themselves “in the same boat” in Stockholm, Sweden!
