More than 700 workers at Active Industries Corp., a machine tool company because of a lockout at the Elkton plant, after rejecting a 37% to 52%, a contract offer that would have replaced the one that expired Jan. 15.

When members reported to work last Tuesday morning, they found the doors to the plant locked and a sign posted announcing no work was available.

Local 628 President Bob Wilson said the lockout is not a strike by workers, but a business closure by management. Union members would have been willing to work without a contract, he said.

The proposed new contract calls for a two-per-cent pay increase the first year of the contract, plus a cap of 30 cents on cost-of-living raises the next two years.

Health insurance coverage would be reduced from full coverage to a plan with a deductible and 80-20 coverage.

An increase in pensions for new retirees was offered, but former retirees' pensions would be frozen. The company would no longer pay for arbitration and negotiating with union stewards and officials, under the proposed contract.

Wilson said union members were pleased with the pension offer, but that the whole package together was unacceptable.

"It would have been a different story if we hadn't had our wages frozen the last four years. If we had been getting raises right along, and they said its a mistake to have corrected, we might have been more receptive," Wilson said.

"But when they went to hit retirees, the union time, the insurance all at the same time, it's a pretty big cut."

One of the main objections to the proposed health insurance plan was that previous retirees' insurance plans would have changed to the new plan.

"The previous retirees forced to pay insurance through the company because of a previous insurance policy would go under the new plan," Wilson said. Retirees use more of their health benefits than do younger members because of age-related illnesses.

Active General Manager Donald Sten said the lockout "an impossible situation. The last thing we want is a situation where we have a strike or otherwise."

The company has been under increasing pressure from the major automakers to reduce its costs, Sten said, and is considering an additional lockout.

Orders for stampings from Huron County's biggest employer have been stagnant.

"Ever since the past six months. There's no work available."

Management staff has also been pared accordingly, Sten said, dropping from 99 A few months up to 72 new.

Insurance costs for employees have risen since the past few years, also, company officials say, and the new insurance package would save the company about 10 per cent of the cost of the present policy.

Wilson emphasized that the union is not on strike, but that the company had locked workers out.

"A strike has never been our intention. Nobody wants to go on strike," he said.

"We'd be here today working under the old contract. But sooner or later you have to draw the line of where you're going to stop giving back."

He also acknowledged that even if the contract had been approved, all but about 100 employees would have been laid off from their jobs.

"We were going to be laid off anyway. The only reason they kept us here two years is have us here to run parts ahead for the next 90 days. So the economy is not helping us," Wilson said.

Union members may not be eligible for unemployment benefits because of the labor dispute. Wilson said, but the union plans to appeal any denial of benefits.

"If they're (the company) going to stall around with unemployment, that's going to put the hurt on us, and that's what the company is hoping for," he said.

"The more you hurt, the more you'll accept it or something less than that."

Other union locals in the Thumb haven't had much success to say to each other in recent years. Wilson said, but those unions have offered help to Local 628 members, he added.

25 new jobs for Pigeon

Hurcon Casting, Inc., has announced plans for a $3.1 million expansion program which will enable the company to capacity by 50% and could bring up to 25 more jobs to the Pigeon plant.

Hurcon Casting officials DeVere Sturm, Leeby Wurst and Gary Bondy met with the Pigeon Village Council last week, and a 12-year abatement reducing property taxes on the expansion by half, through an Industrial Facilities Tax Exemption certificate.

The men said a new molder valued at $850,000, and a cooling tower valued at $650,000, are planned and would greatly increase Pigeon's casting capacity.

Council formally approved the tax abatement, noting that original exemptions sought when the Hartley Street foundry opened in 1972 have expired in 1989 and one does so this year.

Several others said in 1994, when the property goes on the full property tax roll, Construction should begin in the near future, officials said.

In other business, Council:--Agreed to seek a compro- mise with the Farmers Home Administration, which is requesting the village seek new loans and different financing for the $475,000 still outstanding from the 1990 sewer construction project.

The current sewer loan of 3.5% will expire in 2009 and principal payments total $20,000 this year.

Council voted to pay $5,125 to $5,000 of the current bond in force.

Payments would be finished in 2009 and yearly interest savings would be $1,700, said David Hatton, street commissioner.

Highway repaving discussed

Just how - and just exactly when - highway M-142 through Pigeon will be repaved was to be the subject of a Tuesday morning meeting between Michigan Department of Transportation officials and local leaders.

Engineers and planners from MDOT were to discuss the long-sought repaving project, which will include the highway east-and-west along Michigan Avenue to the stoplight corner, then south along S. Main Street, according to plans.

Local Cub Scouts and Girl Scouts from Pigeon Troop turned out by the dozen to show their support for U.S. troops now serving in the Persian Gulf.

The Pigeon Chamber of Commerce supplied the yellow ribbons as the young- sters gathered Friday to put ribbons on trees downtown. "It's one small way kids can show how much they care about what's going on in the Gulf," says Chamber President Ritonda Busby.

New suspension policy in effect at Lakker

By AMY HEIDEN
Lakker secondary school administrators are implementing a new, more strict discipline policy this semester. The policy, instituted by the school’s principal, Edward A. Thibue, on Sept. 1, replaces the previous policy, which was in effect for the 1992-93 school year.

The new policy, according to Thibue, was developed in consultation with teachers, parents, and other community members. It is designed to improve the school’s discipline and safety, and to provide a more effective and consistent approach to student behavior.

The policy includes provisions for progressive discipline, including verbal warnings, written warnings, and suspension, based on the severity of the offense and the student’s past behavior. It also includes provisions for appeals and for the involvement of parents in the discipline process.

The school is also working to improve communication and collaboration with parents, and to establish more positive and supportive relationships between teachers and students.

The new policy is expected to be in effect for the duration of the school year, and will be reviewed and evaluated at the end of the year to ensure its effectiveness.

Pigeon Prospers in the Future

BY SALLY RUMMEL

Music will fill the air this summer at the Pigeon Art Park, now that plans have been approved by the board of commissioners. The new professional parking lot and building will provide more space and help make the building and the park an even greater place for the community to gather.

According to the Pigeon Village Planning Commission chairman, Kirk Stensrud, "The music will be held on Saturday nights from 7 to 9 p.m. starting May 1st and continuing through the summer months. The music will be provided by different bands and musicians throughout the season."

The village council is planning to use the music as a way to promote the village and attract more visitors to the area. "We are very excited about this new venture and believe it will be a great addition to our community," said Village Manager, Jim McNeil.

The village council is also planning to use the music as a way to promote the local businesses and stimulate the economy. "We hope to attract more visitors to our businesses and help them to get to know more about our village," said McNeil.

The village council is looking forward to seeing the response to the music and hopes that it will be a success. "We are looking forward to the first night of music and believe it will be a great way to start the summer," said McNeil.

The village council hopes that the music will continue for many years to come and become a part of the village's culture. "We are looking forward to the future of this music and hope that it will continue to be a success," said McNeil.
