She can call America 'home' at last

By SALLY FURMEL
The date of Sept. 5, 1981, will remain a major birthday in the life of Ramie Furrer, vice president of the Ohio Women's Basketball Hall of Fame. That day was когда the then 19-year-old was chosen by the San Antonio Spurs in the first round of the National Basketball Association's ( NBA) draft, making her the first woman ever selected by an NBA team. Furrer, who had been a star four-year player at the University of Kentucky, had been promised a spot in the WNBA, but the league was still in its infancy. She was drafted by the San Antonio Spurs, who were looking for a player to fill the void left by the retirement of NBA legend Bill Russell.

Furrer's story is one of perseverance and determination, as she worked hard to prove herself in the male-dominated world of professional basketball. She quickly became a fan favorite with her aggressive playing style and her ability to score and rebound. She played for the Spurs for three seasons, averaging 14 points and 11 rebounds per game, before being traded to the Chicago Sky in 1984.

Furrer's impact on the sport of basketball was significant, as she helped pave the way for other women to follow in her footsteps. She was inducted into the Women's Basketball Hall of Fame in 2010, and her legacy continues to inspire young women to dream big and pursue their dreams, regardless of the obstacles they may face.

The following year, Furrer was named to the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame, becoming the first woman ever to be inducted into that hall of fame. She was also selected to the 1981 All-Star Team and was named the WNBA's Most Valuable Player in 1982.

Today, Furrer is a successful businesswoman and entrepreneur, operating her own company that specializes in sports marketing and management. She is also a sought-after speaker and mentor, sharing her experiences and insights with others who are looking to make a difference in the world of sports.

Furrer's story is one of inspiration and courage, and her legacy continues to inspire young women to dream big and pursue their dreams, regardless of the obstacles they may face. She is a true icon of the sport of basketball, and her impact on the world will be felt for generations to come.

The summer and early cool snap has brought down many constants, which act as a runoff for the early season dew. Almost at the third of October, it is a good time or another fall this year, making Michigan the fifth in the nation. And according to the EPA, more people are taking up the sport each year.

Saturday was National Hunting and Fishing Day and figures show, the take of fall has continued.

As the weather continues to cool, the fishing and hunting season will begin to slow down, but the biggest news that the fishers don't hunt, so therefore there is no one to take the yard of the water, that good news. And, in reality, it is a win-win for everyone.

THE YEAR WAS 1763. Chief Pontiac had succeeded in terrorizing Ottawa, Potawatomi, Ojibwe, Kickapoo, and several other tribes in the region into a loose confederation of Indian nations.

These tribes prepared a plan to attack several of the early pioneer settlements, including Lake Michigan and central Indiana.

The most important of these, in a Michigan historical context, was the attack on Fort Dearborn, which was then just a few years old. The attack occurred just before the end of the French and Indian War, and it was an attempt by Pontiac and his allies to reassert control of the region.

Many of the tribes involved in the attack had been allies of the British during the war, but they had turned against the British after the war ended. They hoped to drive the British out of the region and establish their own control.

The attack on Fort Dearborn was a surprise and it was a success. The settlers at the fort were not prepared for the attack and were caught off guard.

The attack on Fort Dearborn was a significant event in the history of the region. It marked the beginning of the end of British control in the region and the beginning of the end of the French and Indian War.
