A POEM OF REMEMBRANCE-TO BELLE

BY ST. GEORGE BEST

I roam where Briton's daughters shine In beauty like you evening star; But 'tis a beauty less than thine, Thine is a beauty racer far.

Although I wander far and wide From sunny isle to frozen sea,
i dwelt in memory by thy side,
My thoughts are only thoughts of thee

I muse on France's vine-clad hills,

I dy where rippling waters lave My feet on fair Italia's shore; I hear thy voice above the wave, I think of home and thee once me Her maidens framed so witchingly,
