The Sunflower.

In many districts in the West the traveler will see growing immediately about the doors of farm houses beds of sunflowers. The belief of many is that the growing sunflower is a protection from malaria and a preventive of the low fevers of malarious districts. This plant, we believe, is made of but small practical use in America. A scientific writer upon the helianthus says:

"Elsewhere the sunflower, if not admired, is esteemed for practical reasons. Many of our native aboriginals make bread of the seeds. It is cultivated in the South of Europe sometimes as a field crop, the seeds being used as a food for cattle and poultry, and also for making oil, which is little inferior to olive oil, is burned in lamps, and employed in the manufacture of soap. Meal and bread are said to be got from the seeds in Portugal, and these, roasted are often substituted for coffee. seeds are also used like almonds for making soothing emulsions, and in some parts of the Old World are boiled and fed to infants. The leaves are good fodder for cattle, the stems serve for fuel, and contain much potash. The different species of sunflower indigenous to the United States number some forty, scattering from ocean to oceau, and from New England to the Guif. For a plant generally counted unworthy, as it is with us, it surely has many valu-

An Editor's Vacation.

The rash oning man at length mentioned as a recommendation that the pen held ink enough to last through twenty-four the Ireliant writing, and obviated the Ireliant necessity of dipping it in the ink-stand. Thereupon we exclaimed: their young friend, would you deprive is of our vacation?" "I don't understand," he replied. "Why," said we, the only vacation we get is while we dipping our pen in the ink-stand, and no man shall deprive us of that. Please go away with your vacation extingnisher." He saw we were in earnest and he went, not even daring to offer us one of his "fountains" as a gift, and we dipped our old-fashioned pen in our muddy old ink-stand and took a rest.-Albany Law Journal.

> Majolica.—The name is derived from the island Majorca, where the Saracens stablished manufactories of the ware. Afterward the ware was imported into Italy, where it borrowed the classic forms and myths of ancier t Greece and Rome. Hence it is at once domestic and refined in character, Oriental and classic; with the harmony of color of Chinese faience, the grace of ornamentstion of the Persian and the Grecian classic simplicity and symmetry of form. It was famous for its luster, but modern lusters are inferior in beauty to the old methods, especially the secret one which produced the golden luster—a vellow

About Rubber Boots

Undue competition between manufacturers has led to an extent of adulteration and cheapening of material never before known in the business. Crude rubber has the quality of absorbing or of becoming incorporated with a sery large quantity, of cheap and bulky substances like lampblack, chalk, etc., which cannot be detected by the uninitiated, and which call for low-priced goods, not reflecting that low prices slways means low quality. Th result is they waste money on "wild cat" rubber boots, when an extra dollar or two would buy them a pair which will wear to their utmost satisfaction a whole season or more. The "95 Per Cent. Storling Rubber Boots." manufactured by the Candee Ruber Co., New Haven, Conn., is meant to reform this abuse, and is well worth the inspection of those who need a real good article. Every store dealing in the "95 Per Cent. Sterling Rubber Boots," is supplied with a sample cut open to show the construction. They are warranted three months, and the storkeeper will punch the data of sale in the top of the leg of each
