Manchester Enterprise

Manchester, Mich. Thursday, January 24, 1884

Vol. 17. — No. 19.

Whole No. 843.

THE WICKED WIFE.

It was quite a shock when the blacksmith arrived at the door of the house. The wife, who had been sitting in the room, was startled by the sound of his hand on the door. As he entered, she looked up at him with a mixture of fear and interest.

The blacksmith paused for a moment and then began to talk. "I've been sent here to help you with your husband's work," he said. "He's had an accident at the sawmill and needs some medical attention."

The wife looked at him for a moment and then nodded her head. "I understand," she said. "I've always been grateful for the work he does."

The blacksmith smiled and continued talking. "Well, I'll do my best to help him."

As he spoke, the wife began to feel a little bit nervous. She knew that her husband was a hard-working man, but she had never realized how important his work was to them. She thought about all the things he had done for them and how much she owed him.

As the blacksmith began to work on her husband, she stood by his side, watching him with a mixture of concern and interest. She knew that it was important for him to get well, and she was determined to do everything she could to help him.

As the days went by, the wife became more and more involved in her husband's care. She helped him with his treatments and talked to him about his work. She even began to try to help him with his recovery by doing some of the things she could.

It wasn't long before the wife saw a change in her husband. He was starting to feel better, and he was beginning to regain his strength. The wife was overjoyed, and she knew that it was all because of the hard work and dedication of the blacksmith.

As the weeks went by, the wife's husband continued to improve. He was able to return to work and continue his work as a blacksmith. The wife was overjoyed, and she knew that it was all because of the hard work and dedication of the blacksmith.

The blacksmith left the house a few days later, and the wife watched as he walked away. She knew that it had been a difficult time, but she was grateful for the help and support he had given her family.

As the wife looked back at the house, she felt a sense of pride and accomplishment. She knew that it was all because of the hard work and dedication of the blacksmith.

END OF STORY.
WE ARE GOING OUT

The Clothing Trade and on January 10th, will Commence Out of

The Greatest Slaughter Sales

To Close Out Every Dollars Worth

Giving you Goods at 1/3 their Value.

Weekly Scratch Sale

HOUSEHOLD

$1 DOLLAR $1

WILL GO FOR HALF PRICE.

If you will want any Clothing in the next 3 yrs. Get It Now.

We will sell at a bargain, the Store Fixtures,

REMEMBER THIS IS A GENUINE CLOSING SALE

SILVERS CLOTHING HOUSE.