THE STORY TELLER. Come, Teach Me. Come, teach me the worth of affection...

Come, Teach Me. Come, teach me the worth of affection. The love that will never grow cold...

Come, Teach Me. Come, teach me the worth of affection. My heart is now throbbing with pleasure...

Come, Teach Me. Come, teach me the worth of affection. While your face is bright with blushes...

It was a strange, idle happy life that Robin Arnold led during that summer...

Perhaps he would have wondered if it were not for the bright eyes and frank refreshing face of Edith Forrest...

She was a revelation to him after his experience of society girls and of women who were holding fast to the outer edge of society...

He fell in love with her in that quiet companionship, and he told her so. But the presumptive heir of 'rich old Arnold'...

Edith peeped after him, through the curtains in the little attic room that was her own...

His heart turned to her in this moment of real sorrow, not to Belle Burleigh, but Edith did not know...

She sobbed herself to sleep that night, and awakened with a start; the slow tread of many feet came up the garden path...

Edith peeped after him, through the curtains in the little attic room that was her own, but Belle Burleigh, she lost her beauty-sleep for nothing...

mother who worked hard to help her—had set herself against her. When they went to their room that night the mother said to her daughter...

"Belle, my dear, young Arnold has been very much led away by that little country dandy..."

"I suppose she looks pretty amongst the people here," said Belle. "It seems quite providential that we came. We can't get a little, it would be terrible for Arnold to throw himself away at the beginning of his career..."

"The mother laughed as she hung her frittelle on the standard of the looking-glass and tied on her nightgown..."

"I have never disobeyed mamma in all my life. She thinks it best I should do this. Adieu, Belle Burleigh..."

"And for this woman I have lost Edith Forrest," he moaned, as he fell back upon the pillow...

He left the farm as soon as he was well again, and went back to the city to lead a new life—an earnest life...

He worked hard for a year or two, and every now and then he wrote to old Auntie Forrest, who answered him at length...

The letters increased in number, and were a great pleasure to him. They were curious letters, for a plain old woman, who only read her Bible, to write; and it was singular for Arnold to kiss them so tenderly and wear them next his heart...

At last he wrote that he was coming down at Christmas, and went. Those who have two hundred dollars or more in our control the sale in theory, but one of them do. The whole is managed in New York. Very remarkable profits have accrued for several months of these ventures...

But out on the porch the sounds of music and laughter were heard but faintly. Edith and Arnold stood there. He had called her out to 'see how bright the moon was,' and had caught up a great shawl and thrown it about both their heads...

"Just one kiss before you go in," he said. She turned her lips to his. What was the use of refusing? She had already promised to give him her heart and hand in May-time...

Saw a Sea Serpent. The officers and crew of the schooner Edward Waite, of Portland, Me., which arrived at this port recently, are positive that they fell in with a genuine sea serpent on the voyage from Portland to this city with a cargo of sugar...

"Your uncle is dying," it read. "Come at once!" In grief and excitement he read the summons, and made all the haste he could to obey it...

The old farmer drove him to meet the midnight train; he waited for no baggage, hardly for an adieu. Edith peeped after him, through the curtains in the little attic room that was her own, but Belle Burleigh, she lost her beauty-sleep for nothing...

and!" and then she stole back and replaced the missive where she had found it. There was a sound of gliding footsteps; the door closed; silence followed. He opened his eyes, and found that he was alone...

"It is over," he said. "I understand her now." "Your friends are gone, my dear," said good Auntie Forrest, coming in at twilight with his tea...

"I have never disobeyed mamma in all my life. She thinks it best I should do this. Adieu, Belle Burleigh..."

Speculative Clerks. Within a few months there has grown up among the clerks in the departments a perfect craze for speculating in the New York markets. There has always been more or less of stock gambling among the clerks. It began during the war, when Washington was an excellent point to watch the gold market...

Entered as Second-Class Matter...

Another strike of telephone operators is threatened.

The Michigan military rifle association hold their sixth annual meeting at Jackson, June 25th and 26th.

Ed. Brighton, of Brooklyn, has set out nearly 100 shade trees along the streets of that burg this spring.

A detective confiscated a suit of clothes bought in Canada and sent by express to a university student at Ann Arbor.

The next annual meeting of the Sunday-school association of Lake Erie district of the M. E. church, will be held at Chelsea, on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 10th and 11th of June.

The resignation of Miss Emma Hall, superintendent of the industrial home for girls, at Adrian, has caused her sister Fannie, and Miss Freeman, teachers, the doctor and three housekeepers to resign.

On the night of the 10th the two milk depots at Jerome were forcibly entered. At the Michigan Stores $30.00 and an overcoat was secured, and at the Michigan & Ohio a suit of clothes and all the money in the place.

The following legend appears upon the safe of a North Adams, Hillsdale county, merchant: "Please don't bust it; here is the combination—20, 50, 100—Adrian and leave the key in the door."

Mr. Freeman, editor of the Stockbridge Sentinel, and formerly of the Decker Leader, has been missing for a week or more, and his friends believe that he has wandered off in a dazed mental condition. He is a spiritualist and rabid temperance advocate.

Dr. E. H. Hulse has returned from Florida. He will make that state a permanent winter residence, but will remain in Tecumseh during the summer.

L. P. Wheeler, of Tecumseh, is just now engaged in getting up "portraits in stamps," which is the latest wrinkle in elegant correspondence. They are the same size as the postage stamp and are very nicely gotten up. The stamps are printed on the back and can be attached to paper, envelope, card or anything you wish.

Wilbur Short lost a fine cow last week. Ed. Stoner is dangerously sick with spinal fever. Work was begun on Frank Brown's new house last week.

D. W. Palmer has to be improved that he takes a short ride each day. O'Neill brothers have commenced remodeling H. C. Calhoun's house.

The Mitchell children, who have had the scarlet fever, are recovering fast. A Irish Arnold raised a large barn on Tuesday. The work was done by David Ross.

George Metz has enclosed the Feast properly with herbed wine. It has been a common for many years. Debra Mills went to Ohio for horses, but found them too high priced to purchase for speculation, and returned without any.

Vanhook Bros., J. M. Kross, H. R. and F. M. Palmer, Levey Bros. and H. C. Calhoun sold their wool to the Kimballs, of Adrian, on Monday.

Something should be done by the officers of district No. 3 in regard to the use of profane language among the abolitionists, as it is treating 2,000 dozen in this manner and expects to be able to keep them the same as fresh eggs for an indefinite period.

The HERBERTS is one that has all the relative, friend and acquaintance plus together in a frame work of embroidery. It may not be altogether a compliment to Mr. Black to have his features tickled in the foot of the bed, or Mr. Black with a stitch in his side, merely protesting against another pillow sham, but it will whittle away long hours of idleness and be indispensible to the person who possibly gallery on the counterpane, and possibly the consolation may affect the ancient nightgown, and send the frazzled neck galloping off in disgust—Free.

WAMPLER'S LAKE.

E. F. Jones, digging on the marsh bordering township.

W. Ayerworth and Dr. Culver went to Adrian, Monday, after goods for Mrs. D. Lawrence.

Mrs. Samuel Antell has a very good chicken. It has two bills and three eyes. It died but will preserve it in alcohol.

Tan Ayres will squish farm in its opposition to John Brown this season. Each will have about ten acres.

There should be a society here for the prevention of cruelty to animals. It could do a very thriving business.

John Walker brought his sister and family of 11 persons with him from Germany. We shall have to send John again.

Some of our subscribers got a lot of bill fish, and cooked one for an experiment. All stated it good eating but rather coarse grained meat.

CLINTON. Danforth Keres named the sinner in this township.

The heavy rains of last week delayed the fall work in a great many places, and could not be withdrawn. Plenty of water was obtained at 40 feet, but it was quick sand.

John T. Clark was compelled to abandon his drive well. At a depth of 85 feet the well broke in a mass of hard pan, and could not be withdrawn. Plenty of water was obtained at 40 feet, but it was quick sand.

Painting Bald Heads

A new art industry has been developed in this city, which promises to create a revolution in the art world and bring on a new era of headed brigades. Heretofore the unfortunate members of the latter organization, who like and dislike Ned of tenuous and a star member, have no hair on the top of their heads, the place where the hair grows, have had recourse to wigs, but their hair is short, and now that this is changed, a little French professor has lately arrived in the metropolis, bringing with him an art that will drive the wigmakers wild with envy and open up possibilities of cranial embellishment that are almost limitless.

Egyptian Corruption

The other day a shipload of invalids passed Massowah on the way from Hasser to Suaz. These men had spent many years—twelve I was told—in the equatorial province. Most of them were completely broken down. But they had no medical attendance, and nothing to eat or drink except parched grain and muddy water. The Egyptian Government may be unable to afford either food or physic, but in that case it has no right to extend what it pleased to call its sway over three thousand miles of land southward from the Mediterranean. For enduring his worst than dog's life the Egyptian soldier in these provinces receives seventy-five piasters, or considerably less than a pound per month. The men complain that, even with their meager rations, they can scarcely keep body and soul together with such pay. With a better class of officers and an increase of pay to 120 piasters the service might be rendered both popular and efficient.

Fern's Railroad Builder

"The story of Henry Meiggs," said one of his old acquaintances the other day, "is almost pathetic in that part of it where in his old age he sought to repair the errors of his youth, especially in reference to financial obligations. One day a young Long Islander, the son of wealthy parents, was buying a Christmas present for his mother at Tiffany's, when he saw a superb silver set, the pieces of which bore the monogram 'H. M.' He learned that it had been made at great cost for the Peruvian railroad contractor. He felt at the time of the magnificence of the silver set, and, as he presented his mother with the single piece of silver which he had purchased, said that he hoped to be able some day to buy her a fine set as that ordered by Henry Meiggs."
