CHAPTER I.
IT IS NOT often that a man in looking back upon the story of his life, can find the precise moment at which his fate was decided, and the change that was to do so, was not a sudden turning point, but a long and gradual process, extending over many years, and in the course of which the man himself was constantly changing, and the world around him was constantly changing.

CHAPTER II.
There is hardly a brighter look to be seen in the face of a young man than that which is seen in the face of a young man who has just been successful in a venture of some kind.

CHAPTER III.
It was not until he had reached the age of twenty that he began to feel the weight of the world upon his shoulders.

CHAPTER IV.
There is a certain amount of truth in the saying that a man is what he does.

CHAPTER V.
It was not until he had reached the age of thirty that he began to feel the weight of the world upon his shoulders.

CHAPTER VI.
It was not until he had reached the age of forty that he began to feel the weight of the world upon his shoulders.

CHAPTER VII.
It was not until he had reached the age of fifty that he began to feel the weight of the world upon his shoulders.

CHAPTER VIII.
It was not until he had reached the age of sixty that he began to feel the weight of the world upon his shoulders.

CHAPTER I.
"You cannot get in here!" I said, holding my hand against his arm, as he tried to open the door through the open window.

CHAPTER II.
At the table I sat that evening I saw I paid little attention to the feelings of the other guests, but I was constantly occupied with my own thoughts.

CHAPTER III.

SCHOOL DAYS.

SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT.

Next Monday morning, Sept. 6th, the school bells will call the children from the play grounds to the school room. They have had a long and pleasant vacation and now they are expected to return to the labors with zeal and determination.

The school board have secured Prof. W. A. Phillips, of East Saginaw, to be principal of the school, and they confidently expect that he will fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Prof. Ladd with credit to himself and honor to the district.

It will be held on Saturday the 6th to attend the examinations at the union school house. It is a well-known fact that the school board of the union schools, the following information:

The School Board, of the Manchester-Palms Schools, take pleasure in announcing to the public that they have engaged great care in the selection of teachers, and expect, with the present faculty, to do credit to themselves and the school for the coming year. The English course of instruction has been prepared by the Board of Education and Instruction, giving prominence to those studies which form the general work of a complete education. A Language Course, of four years duration, has also been prepared to meet the wants of those who desire preparation for college. Every endeavor will be made by the Board and Teachers to make the work both practical and, and to give to our children the best advantage of the use of our High Schools.

Written or oral examinations will be held in all the departments at the close of each month's advance work. A record of daily recitations will be kept, and an average of the two below 50 per cent will subject the pupils to a re-examination.

Students applying for admission to the High School, should be prepared to pass a thorough examination in Local Geography, Practical Arithmetic, Grammar and English History. Students from the Grammar School, before their admission to the High School, will be examined in the experimental in Progressive Arithmetic, United States History and Grammar, an average of 50 per cent will be required to pass.

A Library Society will be organized at the school, to be managed by the pupils of the High School, will be put in operation at the beginning of the coming year. The work of this society will be found helpful in acquiring self-reliance and a knowledge of the common receipts and $200.00 for the last year.

Sunday School Teaching.
When we take up the calling incident, we do so thoughtfully, we are in danger of treating this great work too much in a commonplace way. This Sunday school work is not a mere routine, it is a noble and noble life. It is a life of service, it is a life of sacrifice, it is a life of love. It is a life of the highest imperfection. We must not think that anything will do for the Sunday school, whose chief aim is for the salvation of the young. When we consider the greatness of the Savior's love in coming into the world to die for the redemption of the world, we must not think that anything will do for the Sunday school, whose chief aim is for the salvation of the young. ### FIVE MILLION POUNDS

By F. WATKINS BISHOP. A New Story by this gifted young author. The principal scenes are laid at a celebrated watering place.

A THRILLING EPISODE.

which at once engages the reader's sympathies. This interest is not allowed to flag for one moment throughout the whole narrative. The author has evidently drawn his Characters, Plot and Situations from Real Life, as they are pictured with the realism of a photograph.
