Roll of Honor.

We have prepared some data this week, which we trust will be interesting as show ing in a measure the comparative standing of the school. Those pupils apposite whose names is placed an [*] or a [[*] are star stu dents, having been neither absentinor tardy this term. There has been a marked in crease of attendance as the following demonstrates: Whole number enrolled to date 333; aggregate attendance in half days 11,115; aggregate absence in half days, 505 per cent, of attendance, 94 plus; number to foreign pupils enrolled to date, 27; comparative percentage of the different depart ments, High school, 97; Grammar, 95; In termediate, 93; Second primary, 89; First primary, 93; Ward school, 95;

If I had not promised a former wife of mine that I would never touch liquor I would have been amply justified that evening in sat-urating myself with bay rum or some other eductive beverage

I paid a large price a week beforehand for a seat at the Hamlet performance, because I had met Mr. Booth once in the Rocky mountains and had made a deep impression on him. I had also told him that if he ever happened to be in a town where I was lectur ing I would dismiss may audience to come and hear-him, and he might do as he thought best about shutting up on the following night

Well, I noticed at first, when I went in, that the row before me was unoccupied, and I gathered myself up in a strong, manly em-bace and hinged myself with joy. The cur-tain hamped itself, and the first act was about in the act of producing itself, when a moch little gentleman; with an air of conscious guilt, caine down the aisle in advance of a guilt, came down the asse in advance of a mannaris excursion, consisting of four female members of his family, I judged. He looked about over the house, family took off his coat and scenned to be preparing himself for the vigilance commutes. LONDON'S TENEMENT CHILDREN

A Host of Unwashed, Scantily Dressed,

Juvenile Humanity at Play At all hours of the day, and but too often far into the night, there may be seen disporting itself in the roadway of street metuding its gutters; a good deal of unwashed, scantily dressed, juvenile humanity. These juveniles range venile humanity. These juveniles range from babes of 3 or four weeks old up to the boys analygirls of 10 or 12 years of age, who have charge of them. For, where is not a girl in the family. are pressed into the service as baby-minders, which is so much the worse for girls are. With girls of the gutter children class, the role of "little mother" to treal live" babies seems to come as natural as does doll nursing to the little girls of the better off classes of society

To the casual observer the children of Tenement street look a miserable set of little wretches, but, as a matter of fact, they are happy enough in their way. They are sharp, active, self-reliant, easily pleased, and especially capable in the matter of pleasing themselves. Their games are for the most part toyless ones, so far at any rate as "bought" toys are congerned, and that is perhaps why they have a tendency toward the form of dramatic representation. They play at - and in wonderfully realistic fashion fathers and mothers, keeping house, keeping shops and keeping school. It is perhaps worth remark that the latter game, as played by gutter children, does not embrace the idea of the abelition of corporal punishment. The came—or the stick, strap or rope's end, used as a substitute for it—is regarded not merely as the emblem, but also as the practical instrument of authority. With it discipline is maintained and attention to fathers and mothers, keeping house, keeping shops and keeping school. It is pline is mainta studies secured. maintained and attention to ecured. The mimic pedagogues of the gutter apply it freely, and with a vigor that is not always sufficiently restrained, even by the fear of reprisals the recollection that the teacher of one the pupils is evidently regarded as the highest prerogative of the teacher, and the one thing that makes the office enviable.

In some of the outdoor games of the gutter youths there is a good deal of chanting of doggered rhymes, and it may well be that the idea of the action songs, which now form so popular a part of the kindergarten system, was originally taken from these street games. All the Year Round,

Everybody is now more or less familiar with the latest theory of epidemic disease, which is now known to be propagated by germs that may, under certain circumstances, be disseminated by the winds, and are taken into the system winds, and are taken into the system through the lungs or the stemach. Here is a remarkable anticipation of this gern's theory. Thevenot, who died in 1667, in his account of his Asiatic travels, tells us of a hot postilential wind prevailing in summer from northwest India up to the western frontier of Persia. He thinks he has identified this wind with one men-tioned in the Book of Job, and he says that they who breathe it turn black and fall dead—not, however, everybody who inhales this wind, but, he explains, there are stroaks of fire in it as small as a hair, which, have been seen by rome, and they who breathe in these rays of lire die of them, the rest receiving no prejudice. "If it be so," continues Theyenot, "if may be the thought that these fires' volant proceed from sulphurous exhala-tions that rise-out of the earth which being tessed by the wind kindle (for they are inflammable), and being with the air sucked in by respiration, consume the entrails in a moment." Thus, in their mere wild guessing about the influence of Asiatic winds, more than two cen turies ago, we have, mixed up with much that is fantastic, the distinct hypothesis of the germ origin of disease. the possibility of these germs being dis tributed by the air, and the mode of in-troduction into the human system, all of which is now entirely corroborated by the latest science.—New York Home Journal.

One of the greatest enemies of the salmon and the salmon fisheries in Oregon is the sea lion. It is estimated that half the salmon that enter the Columbia river the early part of the season are captured by these big beasts which also damage nets to the amount of thousands of dollars. Oscillation of Chimneys.

The extent or degree of the oscillation of chinneys has been exactly measured by observation of the shadows cast by illesin upon the ground. An instance in point is that of a chimney 115 feet high and 4 feet in diameter externally at the top, near Marseilles, France, the oscillations of which were observed by the shadow during a high wind to attain maximum of Beef in Southwestern Texas.

In some of the yards we see the people

drying long strips of beef on frames which is their favorite way of keeping it the flesh becoming dry and hard, so that it will last a long time. Even in hot weather the evaporation is rapid and the meat dries before tainting, and can then be carried anywhere without danger of losing it. Thus treated the beef is wholesome and good, and by no means unpalasome and good, and by no means unpara-table. I may be sold by the yard, as it looks like so many brown ropes hanging from the frames. Mexican butchers have the knack of stringing the meat out in this way, which must have been acquired from the Indians, who do the same. No salt is necessary. When one of the inhabitants wishes to make a trip into Mexico he gets his meat ready, then his commeal, and away he goes; finding water for himself and his horse at known places, the animal feeding on what grass it can find, and doing well enough. it can find, and doing well enough. Mistreatment of Colds

There have been more colds than I here noticed during the winter, and men with stuffed heads are taking nauseous medicines to break up the blockade medicines to break up the blockade. There's the trouble with most people too much medicine. You have heard the adage: "Feed a cold and starve a fever." That's not the modern reading, which should be: "Starve a cold," etc. It is cruel to deny patients with a fever food and drink, and it is very bad to eat heavily when your system is filled with conversion from a cold. Don't stuff your congestion from a cold. Don't stuff your stomach, for abstemiousness with simple remedies is a sure cure. Take no supper. bathe your feet in hot water and go to bed to prespire, and you will wake up re-lieved. Going out at nights and eating at establishments or indulging in banat establishments or indulging in ban-quets is the best aid to a cold. Serve the courses slowly, get home after 12 o'clock and you will be out of shape for a week afterwards,—Physician in Globe-Demo-WE ARE WITH YOU ONCE MORE: crat.

Reverence for River Sources

The natives of India have a great rev erence for the sources of a number of their largest rivers, whose waters by means of irrigating works are often used in times of drought to nourish the soil and prevent or mitigate famine. The Godavery, the most important river in south India, takes its rise in a brook that issues from a hillside near the village of Nassik. The spot where this brook gushes from the rock is approached by a flight of 600 stone steps, at the top of which is a great stone platform built at the foot of the rock from which the stream issues. An image under a large canopy has been so placed that the water pours out of its mouth and then gees sparkling down the hill. The Parvenu's Plate.

I have known Boston parvenues to buy English plate already supplied with coats of arms, etc., and then faithfully live up to the pictures on the silver. Here this is a positive fact: An English lord who came over here to visit some American friends was very much pleased to find that all the bowls, pitchers and glasses in the apartments devoted to his use bore his family cress. He commented on the delicary of the compliment to his wife They found out subsequently, however. that several years before their American riends had appropriated the pictorial de-vice for their own use simply because they thought it pretty and attractive. When the guest's Chamber had been done up by the artist, then admiration for it had weakened, and the cost of arms in use in other portions of the house was entirely different.—New York Mail and
