Living on His Book. I was in Donventure's store the other afternoon when the door opened and a small boy came in. In a moment more I saw that it was a little old gentleman, nearly doubled up with some apical weakness and very shabbily dressed, but clearly with his face was perfectly healthy. He walked in with a perfect posture of readiness and a perfect posture of readiness and a perfect posture of readiness.

Robison & Koebbe, Daylight Clothiers. THE ENTERPRISE SHIRLEY CARSTONE. By ELIZA ARCHARD. (Copyrighted by the American Association.) The trouble seemed to be with Shirley's face in repose. It was a look that seemed to be looking at you from half round the world, looking at you from half round the world, looking at you from half round the world.

The university appropriation bill failed to pass the house.

There has been great loss of life on the lakes this season by storms, fires, etc.

Now that he vetoed the university appropriation bill ain't you glad Gov. Luce don't get more than $1,000 a year salary? Does he deserve more.

The Ann Arbor Democrat spells Luce with a small I since the governor vetoed the university bill. The people seem to be losing their respect for him.

Ladies who are troubled with ants getting into their pantries, etc., will find that salt sprinkled around freely where they are found is an effectual remedy as they will not remain where it is.

The Ninth Michigan cavalry will hold its reunion at Colwater, August 10. Hon. J. H. McGowan, ex-Auditor General Stevens and other prominent men will be present and speak.

Idle boys are kept after school because they do not have their lessons. If the people could keep the legislators at Lansing the balance of the season perhaps they would tumble to the racket that the people wish them to go to work and pass such laws as they could endorse.

Michigan had the brightest record of any state in the economy of its legislature and the industry and faithfulness of its state officers. It had more and better institutions than any other state in proportion, and the lowest expenses, the lightest tax. This was a record of which every Michigan man should be proud.

Profitable Cattle.

It is a fact that the Jersey and Ayrshire cows are the most profitable of any breed. In proportion to their size and the amount of food they consume, they yield a large quantity of rich milk, but with all their superior qualities they are comparatively worthless as feeders of beef producers. Some Jerseys have been known to give 18 to 20 quarts of milk per day, and yield 14 pounds of butter in a week. Jerseys and Alderneys frequently give 16 quarts daily and yield 8 to 12 pounds of butter per week.

Some families of short horns unite with size, substance and aptitude to fatten excellent milking qualities. Short horns or animals with a large infusion of short horn blood constitute the bulk of the handsome and high-priced cows seen in the metropolitan markets and long preferred to all others by the London dairymen. Great importance is the fact of the animals being descended from parents possessing good milking qualities, for certainly no characteristic is more distinctly hereditary. So much for the encyclopedia.

As milking, like dishwashing, must be performed a number of times every day, many devices have been sought and contrived. A writer in an agricultural paper avers "that the most valuable and most successful cowmilk ever made or used was a woman's hand." Now I must admit the value of the hand, but do not believe the inventor intended it for that purpose.

At an eastern farmers' club the question for discussion was: "What is the value of a cow that will make 20 pounds of butter in a week?" Henry Stewart in the Rural New Yorker, answered: "The value of the very best quality of butter may be 50 cents per pound. The cow then produces $10 per week, or counting the average length of the productive season at the rate of 35 weeks $350 in the year. The cost of feeding such a cow to produce said product would be $2 per week, or $104. If she averages said product for seven years her profits would be $250, from which deduct $728, leaving a profit of $1722." From the foregoing estimate he concludes the cow at two years old is worth $400. In the above estimate the value of the buttermilk, the skimmed milk and the calves is unnoticed.

The late Edwin Smith, of Clinton, estimated that the price he received for his calves was the interest on the value of the cow, considering that the milk from his best cows would raise the calf and pay for the keeping of the cow.

Mr. Martin, of Clark county, Kentucky, reports to the department that the short horns are the best for milk and butter of any he has ever had. He has owned several cows, each of which would give over 30 quarts of milk per day, having an average of 10 per cent of cream. Many years ago he purchased two short horn cows, one of them was a constant milker, giving 22 quarts per day, the other 2 quarts daily. The latter was always fat while the former was invariably lean while giving milk, however well-fed, but fattened very quickly when dry.

THE BLOODHOUND MYTH.

They Were Never Used by Slave Holders for Tracking Negroes.

It is strange how long the world will stick to an error, especially if it is either romantic or sympathetic in its tendency. I have never seen any one who has read "Uncle Tom's Cabin" remember the bloodhounds employed to track the poor runaway. This bloodhound myth has lived uncontradicted until now. Only the other day I read a terrible story of a fugitive who ran away from a slave before the war, and was hunted with bloodhounds, etc.

"The truth of the matter was that bloodhounds were never used in the south for pursuing runaway negroes, or for any other purpose. I have no idea that there has been a real bloodhound in the state of Virginia for fifty years. A cross of the common foxhound and Spanish bloodhound, and these brutes have been exhibited at dog shows and old time slave tracking bloodhounds, to the great terror and awe of the guileless spectator.

"The dogs used in tracking negroes—whenever any were used—were the ordinary hounds of the south, such as were trained for deer driving, bear hunting or wild hog shooting. If well-trained, they will track anything that goes on legs, and will hunt up a white man or negro as readily as they will pursue the mauling coon, or his great brother, the black bear, still found in the mountains of the Carolinas, Virginia or Tennessee, common in the swamps and canebrakes of Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas, and particularly in the section known as "The Devil's Summer Retreat," about fifty miles from the mouth of the White, immortalized in Porter's famous story of "Bob Herring, the Bear Hunter," printed in the Old Spirit nearly fifty years ago.

"The only bloodhounds that ever came into Louisiana or Mississippi were imported from Cuba in 1845 by a wealthy gentleman who owned large estates in that parish of Texas, Louisiana, and in Claiborne county, Mississippi, who, by the way, was a friend, pupil and distant relative of the eminent Republican statesman from Maine. There were three couples of these dogs, and it was thought they might increase the keenness of scent of the hound of the period by crossing the breed. The experiment, however, worked disastrously. After acquiring a pack in two or three years' time, Mr. Gillespie took them out for trial. They had not far to go before they struck the fresh trail of an old bear of aldermanic proportions. He was making his usual morning trip to the plantation cornfield, where he had fed ever since he was a cub. No culpable old gentleman, peacefully going from his house to his club, could have been more astonished at an assault from traps than was the old bear I speak of. Finally, realizing the situation, he lashed up against a cypress, and killed five of the dogs in less time than a wiry terrier would kill the same number of rats. The owner of the dogs had not expected to put up a bear so near, and without a gun. The improved dogs, instead of snapping at the bear and letting go when he turned on them, as well-trained bear dogs do, just caught hold and held on, with the consequences mentioned. It ended the importation of bloodhounds, and the dear and bear hunters of Louisiana and Mississippi concluded they would let their breed of dogs be their own, and not introduce any more foreign innovations."—Washington Courier-Journal.

The association has a membership of about 80. Last Thursday evening the band of italian musicians—two violins and a harp—accompanied by Delos LeBaron, a commercial traveler, well known to many of our citizens from having at one time conducted a dry goods store here, rendered some fine music at the Goodyear House. Delos played an ockerera. An unfortunate, and unpleasant circumstance happened Tuesday in the school laboratory. Frank Dorr, while generating some sulphuretted hydrogen, not noticing that the gas was passing off, allowed the test tube, which he was using as a generator, to burst, throwing the sulphuric acid into his eyes. Ammonia was applied, so that now he is very nearly recovered and will be able to assume his place among the graduates. The Lake Shore will sell special excursion tickets at half fare, one fare for the round trip, to and from all stations on its line and branches, July 2d, 3rd, and 4th; good to return until July 5th, inclusive. Ample accommodations for all will be provided on above days. Last Monday morning Martin McMahon's team became frightened and ran away on Exchange Place, tipping the wagon over, but doing no serious damage. Mack Robison's express wagon was standing near by with George Field upon it, who was calmly gazing at the runaway horses when Robison's team suddenly determined to follow suit and George, wholly unconscious of their intentions, took a double header in the road, but happily no serious injury was done, and the horses stopped after going a short distance. Grass Lake has given up the attempt to celebrate the glorious 4th, as the necessary funds cannot be raised. A house of ill-fame was completely destroyed by fire at Jackson yesterday, and Lizzie White, the proprietor, barely escaped suffocation. The pioneer meeting at Jackson last Saturday was attended by about 400 people from all parts of the county. Vice presidents from each township were elected. Following is a partial list: Grass Lake, Wm. H. Walker; Napoleon, Wm. Blackman; Norvell, James Cobb. On Friday, June 10th, Edward Calley, of Grass Lake, and Nate Haskell, of Norvell, were driving to the latter place, when the buggy broke down throwing them both to the ground. Calley died the next morning from the fall. He was the father of Miss Ella Calley, who taught in our union school about two years ago. Work at the gas well is steadily progressing. The drill is now down about 1,500 feet and is being sunk on an average six feet an hour. Thursday forenoon the drill run out of the bed of slate it had been in for nearly 1,000 feet, save fifty feet of sand about the center of the slate bed, and at 1,344 feet was in a red rock. At 1,375 feet it passed through a three foot vein of coal, mixed with slate. Ten feet lower a light, sandy rock was passed, and at 1,390 feet was again in slate. There is no water nor has any been struck since the 5 1/2 inch tubing was put in, which goes down only 380 feet. Work is continued day and night, one set of men working from noon until midnight, the other from midnight until noon.—Jackson Tribune. Later—At a depth of 1,750 feet, the 22d, the gas well drill plunged into a stream of brine, and the salt water ascended into the well for a distance of 500 feet. Work has stopped, and what further will be done is not yet known. Miscellaneous. STATE OF MICHIGAN—County of Washtenaw. In the matter of the estate of William H.
