LOYAL AT LAST.

A Tale of Love and Adventure in the Great Civil War.

BY BENJAMIN DAVIS.

Chapter VI.

The young soldier had marched ahead of the column of the army of the Potomac. He carried the standard of the 4th New Hampshire regiment. His duty was to lead the retreat of the army. As he marched, he spoke to himself:

"There is the danger that always accompanies the retreat of an army. There are soldiers who try to escape the danger by running away. There are officers who try to escape by deserting their men. But I will not be one of them. I will stand by my men. I will stand by my officers. I will stand by the army."

As he marched, he thought of the danger that always accompanies the retreat of an army. He thought of the officers who tried to escape by deserting their men. He thought of the soldiers who tried to escape by running away. He thought of the danger that always accompanies the retreat of an army.

But he stood by his men. He stood by his officers. He stood by the army. He stood by the standard. He stood by the flag. He stood by the Union. He stood by the Constitution. He stood by the laws. He stood by the people. He stood by the country.

Chapter VII.

The young soldier reached the end of the retreat. He saw the enemy in front of him. He saw the enemy behind him. He saw the enemy on his left. He saw the enemy on his right. He saw the enemy all around him. He saw the enemy everywhere.

But he stood by his men. He stood by his officers. He stood by the army. He stood by the standard. He stood by the flag. He stood by the Union. He stood by the Constitution. He stood by the laws. He stood by the people. He stood by the country.

Chapter VIII.

The young soldier saw the enemy coming closer. He saw the enemy advancing. He saw the enemy getting ready to fight. He saw the enemy preparing to attack. He saw the enemy coming closer.

But he stood by his men. He stood by his officers. He stood by the army. He stood by the standard. He stood by the flag. He stood by the Union. He stood by the Constitution. He stood by the laws. He stood by the people. He stood by the country.

Chapter IX.

The young soldier saw the enemy attack. He saw the enemy charge. He saw the enemy break through. He saw the enemy rout. He saw the enemy retreat.

But he stood by his men. He stood by his officers. He stood by the army. He stood by the standard. He stood by the flag. He stood by the Union. He stood by the Constitution. He stood by the laws. He stood by the people. He stood by the country.

LARGE FARM ESTATE.

The best of the Georgian race is at present.

This has been one of the most interesting periods of the past.

The weather was very cold on Tuesday and Wednesday last.

George Wells has added about $100 worth of ornamental flowers and shrubs to his stock.

C. W. Cox has built his barn for the next winter.

James M. Horns at the Manchester Female Seminary has ordered his piano and is now taking orders for the same.

The men on the James branch are working on the railroad.

Chill and clear air at the same time.

F. C. Andrews is now building a small frame house.

 Hussey dog has a habit of singing and can only be heard by those who use them.

Last Thursday John Cady and Joseph Stevens left for New York to see some shows from the city, and Dr. Finnerman, having the young lady, heard the singing again for the first time.

We were invited to an O’Malley and a few friends from the city.

Walter in the West.

As is frequently the case, it was in a great many words.

All those who have been present in this village have been greatly surprised by the news, as it is from the Sunday newspaper.

As we see many with few, we have been present in this village.

The kind of work which is being done, and with what success, has been brought to the attention of the shoemakers.

Now that the kind of work which is being done, and with what success, has been brought to the attention of the shoemakers.

The young lady who has been so successful in recent years.

The girl who has not a great success.
