ALLEN GRAY; The Mystery of Turley's Point. Being a Few Romantic Chapters From the Life of a Country Editor.

Mr. Strong at once saw that he had every thing on his side. He intended to run for sheriff without any contract or obligation.

Mr. Strong was delighted to sign it, and left the office chuckling at the assurance that he had for once proven too shrewd for Simmons.

Allen bowed his head in his hands and his thoughts reverted, as they invariably did, when not pressed with politicians or poets, to that beautiful being in the mysterious old rock house.

Before his mind had had time to again revert to the painful subject on which it seemed to dwell, the door opened and a young man entered.

"Are you the fellow that runs this establishment?" the modern Hercules demanded.

"Then take that for a meddlesome liar," cried the stranger, aiming a blow at Allen, which he successfully parried.

"What do you mean?" Allen asked, looking at the stranger with a questioning gaze.

"I know. What did you put that piece in the paper 'bout me for?"

"What piece? I have no recollection of having ever seen you until now," answered Allen.

"But he lied about me. He said I stole a corn-knife, and I wasn't agoin' to stand it. I was George Leeper who set ye on me."

"I can not say until I am better informed as to the cause of your visit. I hope, however, that I may be able to be of service to you in some way."

"I know I could stand on my feet, Mr. Gray. This world, which I once thought so good and kind, has proved to be so full of deceit and treachery that I had almost decided never to trust another fellow being.

"Those beautiful eyes became flooded with silent tears, while her pathetic, beseeching manner would have touched a much harder heart than Allen's."

"I will never betray you—I swear I never will!" he answered, with unmistakable earnestness.

A silence fell upon both. The beautiful visitor looked at the editor with a steady gaze, while Allen, having partially regained his composure, sat gazing at her in astonished embarrassment.

"The beauty and mystery which ever hovered over the girl seemed to have increased, and Allen's perplexity had grown greater with them."

"I am not sure that I can get a horse," she said, in a clear, steady voice.

"I must be tonight, Mr. Gray, to-morrow morning, if you can get me a horse."

"How am I to go, by the river?" "No, on horseback."

"I do not know that I can get a horse," she said, in a clear, steady voice.

LOCAL NEWS BRIEVITIES.

The pond was frozen over yesterday morning for the first time this year.

John Kensler is storing 400 or 500 barrels of apples in the basement of the Goodyear hall block.

We had our first snow storm this year last Saturday morning. It was scarcely enough to cover the ground.

The engine company will decorate Goodyear hall and make it look as attractive as possible on Thanksgiving evening, when they have a mask ball.

A Jackson firm has the contract for making all the brooms the government of the united states uses. They say they are better than anything they can get elsewhere.

Rev. John Reichenbach, of Detroit, had services and preached at St. Mary's church, on Sunday last, and will continue in charge of this and Freedom catholic churches.

Whenever "Tommy Mac" comes over from Chelsea, the boys can calculate on having some fun. His last visit was on Friday last, and he was accompanied by a german friend, a sulky and two horses.

There is an occasional complaint from farmers who leave their horses hitched at the church sheds for their whips being stolen. Now we don't know that the fault of their being at the church sheds has anything to do with the theft.

Our readers will remember the accident which befel one of our town boys, Will Pattison, at Detroit, a few weeks ago, while coupling cars. He is yet in the hospital and will be unable to work the coming winter, indeed it is not expected that he can ever follow railroading again.

As every citizen of the village is interested in the maintenance of a good fire department we hope that they will support engine company No. 1 as generally as possible on Thanksgiving night.

The republican ratification meeting was held as announced on Thursday evening last. There were few people in town and those were very quiet.

THE COVENANT RENEWED.

LESSON VIII, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, NOV. 25.

Text of the Lesson, Josh. xiii. 19-28. Commit Verses: 26-28 Golden Text, Josh. xiii. 24. Commentary by Rev. D. M. Strauss.

After the 120 tribes and a half had been dismissed to their homes by Joshua with his blessing, charging them to serve the Lord with all their heart and soul, they, on their way home, when they had crossed the Jordan, built a great altar, which, when the other tribes heard of, they feared idolatry on the part of the eastern tribes, and gathered themselves together at Shiloh to go up to war against them, but by their supposed trespass should bring judgment on the nation.

At the time of our lesson today Israel had long enjoyed rest from all her enemies, and about Joshua was over an hundred years old and low, so he was soon to go the way of all the earth; so he calls all Israel together at Shechem, rehearses to them the Lord's dealings, and urges them to fear and serve Him in sincerity and truth, saying unto them, "If it seem evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve; but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." The people answered in the words immediately preceding our lesson, saying, "We will serve the Lord, for He is our God."

"We cannot serve the Lord," Joshua would have them remember that it is no light matter to serve the Lord; he had known them ever since they left Egypt, he knew how often they had made promises and broken them, and he doubted whether they would be true when they said "all that the Lord hath said will we do and be obedient;" then he and Moses ascended the mount and at the end of forty days returned to find them dancing and singing around a golden calf, deliberately breaking the commands they had solemnly promised to keep.

"If ye forsake the Lord," often had they done it and had been spared only by the intercession of Moses, type of Christ; and Joshua trembles for them, knowing that "The Lord, the God, is a consuming fire, even a jealous God" (Deut. iv. 24). Sin must be consumed, and if the sinner clings to his sin he will be consumed also, but if willing to be cleansed from sin and be holy unto the Lord, then God will consume the sin and save the sinner. It is some- times said that God out of Christ is a consuming fire, but while this is true it is nowhere stated in those words; Christians need to remember that "Our God is a consuming fire" (Heb. xii. 29), and that we are often in the furnace being purified and prepared for the future usefulness, and if He sees sin upon us He will not spare the rod; but all such refining and chastening is in perfect love and that we may be partakers of His holiness. (Mal. iii. 2; Heb. xii. 9-11).

"This is their choice," Joshua had most decidedly taken his stand (v. 19), and had made it plain to them that God would have no half work, and that they could not serve God and worship idols, nor could they serve God in their own strength; and now they have voluntarily taken their stand with him to serve the Lord, and their conduct proves them to have been sincere, for "Israel served the Lord all the days of Joshua, and all the days of the elders that overtook Joshua" (v. 31); Judges ii, 7. The words of Joshua, and the words of the people in this their decision are noble words, and while it is a solemn step to take it is a far more solemn step not to take.

"Witnesses against yourselves." We cannot serve the Lord without taking a stand against self. The world, the flesh, and the devil are the enemies of God and His people, and this trinity of evil is ever seeking to enslave the child of God. The carnal mind is enmity against God; the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh, and these are contrary the one to the other; if any man will come after Me let him deny himself, love not the world; resist the devil (Rom. vii, 7; Gal. v, 17; Matt. xvi, 24; 1 John ii, 15; Jas. iv, 7); these are helpful words and precepts concerning our daily life as servants of the Lord.

"Put away the strange gods, and incline your heart unto the Lord God of Israel." It is heart work that the Lord requires, and we need to be constantly reminded that while men look on the outward appearance and judge by what they see, the Lord looks on the heart. He sees the heart, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts; He is a God of knowledge, and by Him actions are weighed. (1 Sam. xvi, 7; 1 Chr. xxviii, 9).

"The Lord our God will we serve, and he will be our God." If the nation had talked this way and meant it when the spies returned from their forty days' visit through the land they would have saved themselves thirty-eight years' wandering in the wilderness, and the hundreds of thousands who fell there might have entered the good land. Let Christians today make the language of this verse heartily their own, and they will find days of Heaven here on earth (Deut. xi, 21), and be such witnesses unto the Lord that many shall through them be won to Him.

"I have cut a covenant with you." Literally, "cut a covenant" for the verb here translated "made" when used in connection with a covenant, is translated "cut" or "cut off." Both uses of the word are found in Rev. xxiii, 13; "the words of the covenant which they had made before me when they cut the calf in twain and passed between the parts thereof," and this carries us back to the first use of the expression in the Bible, in Gen. xv, 10; "When Abram divided the animals in the midst and watched by the car-

"Every one has by heart these charming little verses of 'The Spiler and the Fly.'" They have always been accredited to Mary Howitt, and naturally, for they are always published over her name. Mrs. Howitt was a charming writer of prose as well as verse, but in this instance is guilty of the sin of plagiarism. The verses are adapted with but little change from a song by the English comic poet H. W. Aldrich, which is to be found in the "Ethical and Social Instructor" (New York, N. Y., London, 1829), set to the music of Thomas Moore's "Will You Come to the Lower?"—Pittsburg Bulletin.

THIS AFTERNOON AT FOUR.

We take pleasure in offering to our readers, through our columns this week, by permission of the owner and publisher, Mr. R. A. Saalfeld, Union Square, New York, the famous song entitled "This Afternoon at Four." It is sung nightly, with round after round of applause, by the popular soubrette, Miss Marie Jansen, in the Opera of Erminie, at the New York Casino Theatre. (COPYRIGHTED)

Musical score for "This Afternoon at Four" by Max Freeman. Includes lyrics and musical notation for vocal and piano parts.

AMONG THE POLYNESIANS.

Their Habits and Customs—Brewing the National Drink—The Pal Maker. While conversing with Surgeon H. W. Whitaker he said he joined his ship, the Mohican, at San Francisco, Cal., in May, 1885, and sailed in her through the Golden Gate the following month for an extensive cruise in the South Pacific, which lasted over three years.

There grows in all the Pacific islands a plant of the lily family, with large leaves and straight, bulbous root, which is full of farinaceous food material, and is used by the natives for making a staple of life with the Polynesians. It is from this root that the pal is made, and it is as much of an institution and quite as great a necessity in the Sandwich Islands as bread making is in the United States.

The pal maker to his Majesty Kalakaua is regarded by him in favor next to his chamberlain, and is a personage much envied. It is prepared fresh every day by first roasting the two roots, from which it is made, mashing and mixing it with a proper quantity of water, then carefully strained to free it from all lumps, after which it is set aside to ferment. When fermentation advances to the proper degree it is ready to be sold to the consumer. It is now either white, pinkish or blue in color, according to the kind of taro used in making, has the consistency of thick flour starch, looks like it, and, in fact, smells like it. It is served in Koo-wod, bowls, highly polished and of different sizes, according to the tastes and capacity of the happy eater of pal.

ANCESTORS OF THE ENGLISH.

England and the English do not, after all, derive their name from the Angles, according to the long rooted tradition, so declares a German government professor, Dr. Benig. After extensive researches, he has discovered that the word "English" originates from the "Engern," a numerous and powerful Saxon race living near the banks of the Weser, on the North sea. This theory rests also upon the authority of the old British monk Gildas, who lived much earlier than Bede, and who speaks only of the Saxons, who colonized Britain. Further, Dr. Benig points out that our supposed forefathers, the Angles, dwelt on the Baltic, further off, and that their country was much smaller than the land of the Engern.—Frank Leslie's.

The tree of Guernica is the tree of the Basque liberties, close to the town of Guernica, in Biscay. This symbolical tree dates back to the origin of Biscayan society. The lords of Biscay look their oaths on a stone bench placed at its foot. The general junias are inaugurated here, and are continued in the adjoining juridical church of Santa Maria la Antigua. It is perpetuated like the Euzkarian family, and is succeeded by its scions. The present tree is nearly a century old, since it was 70 years old when its predecessor, an oak tree, died. The tree which is to substitute the present one was planted a few years ago. Several patriotic songs are dedicated to the tree. Rousseau sent it his blessing, and Gallatin saluted it in the midst of the French convention.—Lippincott's.
