

A gentleman rented a farm and contracted to give to his landlord two-fifths of the produce, but prior to the time of dividing the corn the tenant used forty-five bushels.
When the general division was made, it was proposed to give to the landlord eighteen bushels from the heap, in lieu of his share of the forty-five bushels which the tenant had used, and then to begin and divide the remainder as though none had been used. Would this method have been correct?

method for depicting the stars. We can give exposers of many minutes, or of one, two, three, or even four insurs; and all the time the effect is being gradually accumulated. Hence it is that a star which is altogether too feeble to produce an impression upon the most acute eye fortified by a telescope of the utmost power, may yet be competent, when a sufficient exposure has been allowed, to leave its record en the plate. Thus it is that photographs of the heavens disclose to us the existence of myriads of stars which could never have been detected except.
