Some people prefer to lead money for every piece of paper, no matter how small, because it seems to them a safer way of earning a living. Men who work for wages with a steady income have little to pay for the use of the money, and then they can have the benefit of interest. Still others prefer to lead money, because they are more likely to save it, and then they can have the benefit of interest.

A man who would do so, would have to go to the bank and borrow the money, but he would not have the interest. The interest would be deducted from the amount he borrows, and then he would have to pay for it.
