A LONDON CASE.

The action was one for breach of promise of marriage. The plaintiff was a man, the defendant a woman. And what was more, the latter was at least old enough to be the mother of the former.

On the contrary, he declared in the coolest manner possible that he was a man of extravagant tastes, with a narrow income, and that he preferred stalls at the theater and nice little dinners at the Cafe Royal or the Berkeley, in company with and at the expense of Miss Mumpsey, to a solitary seat in the pit and a shilling dinner in the basement of a coffee-house.

Flora Mumpsey was an old lady of fifty, separated from her husband, an Indian civilian, childless and possessed of a private fortune of two thousand a year. She was a prominent member of several philanthropic associations, and consequently spent much of her time from home.

At the time of her alleged intimacy with the plaintiff, she was, she said, on very friendly terms with a young Australian student, a certain Miss Gertrude Gaylord, who lodged in the dining-room set of No. 99 South Ebury street, where she herself, occupied the drawing-room floor.

The evidence had been concluded the previous evening, and the solicitor general, who appeared for Mrs. Mumpsey, was just rising in his place to make his final address to the jury, when a commotion was heard in the back of the court.

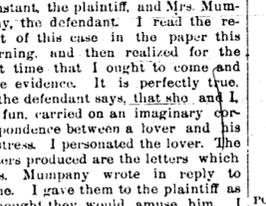

"If your lordship please, I would ask your lordship to allow me to address you as amicus curiæ." "Well, sir, what is it?" asked the judge testily. "You understand that only very exceptional circumstances can justify such interference."

TO PITCH CURVED BALLS.

HOW YOU MAY LEARN TO DO IT WITH PATIENCE.

Suggestions to Aspirants for Fame and Fortune in the Box-Sensible Advice From a Successful Boston League Man.

It is not absolutely necessary, therefore, to curve a ball in order to win success. The writer vividly recalls the famous games in early seasons in the neighborhood of New York. He was a boy then and walked miles to see the contests.

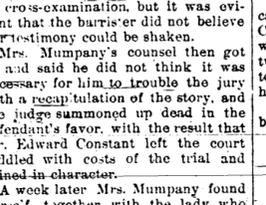

POSITION OF HAND AND FINGERS FOR A STRAIGHT BALL.

And that is the study all young pitchers must pursue. Begin your work by pitching a straight ball. You cannot gain control in a better way. As you are young in pitching experience, so also are your opponents young in their knowledge of batting.

There is another important point to remember. Do not give the batsman a chance to hit the ball with the end of their bats if you can avoid it. This is simple enough if the batter stands close to the plate.

As you improve in your work you can begin to practice curves. John Clarkson, of the Boston League team, who is one of the most successful twirlers in the country, has this advice to give in the New York World.

THE CURVE. side of the hand and next out of the other side. He will soon learn the effect these movements have on the ball.

"To pitch a straight ball it is necessary that the two fingers which grasp the ball should be straight up and down, with their backs in front of the player as he throws.

"Beyond these few hints it is almost impossible to give any intelligible instructions. It will depend almost entirely on the young player's ability, inclination and perseverance how much of a success he will make at curve pitching. He cannot have too much practice. But he should take care not to overexert himself. It is not necessary to exert all his force. He can practice curves without putting his greatest speed into the ball."

From a Physician.

A physician of New York is said to have received the following communication from a rural practitioner: "Dear doctor, I have a patient whose phisical signs show that the windpipe has ulcerated, and I fear his stomach tub is gone. I have given him every thing without effect. His father is wealthy, Onerable and influential. He is an active member of the M. E. Church and god nose I don't want to lose him. What shall I do, and buy return male. yours in need."

A Bear in the Cabin.

A Montana correspondent of the San Francisco Bulletin records an adventure he had with a bear. He was returning to his cabin after an excursion in the mountains and heard a strange sort of rumbling from the inside as he approached.

The Archer Fish.

The Archer fish supplies itself with food by spurring drops of water at flies as they rest upon stalks on the edge of the stream. The fish seldom fails to hit and bring down the fly at which he aims.

KEEP FROM DROWNING.

Can be Done Without Knowing How to Swim.

A Few Practical Precepts—To Walk or Float in the Water—It is Perfectly Natural for All Animals to Swim.

To keep from drowning it is not necessary to know how to swim. This may seem at first a rather strong assertion, but much depends on the meaning that is attached to the word "swim."

The keet or mountain-parrot, of New Zealand, a greenish-brown bird formerly as harmless as a robin of this class, has developed a carnivorous habit as fastidious as that of epicures.

A prominent French doctor reports to the academy of medicine that he has discovered a cure for group. It is a very simple one—a teaspoonful of flowers of sulphur stirred up in a tumbler of water. After three days of this treatment his patient was rescued from death, and fully recovered.

The Dec.

I swam the wetsome river Dec. Release beyond the rolling sea. There lives a maid of high degree. This maid's degree is very high. Her father's a Russian "skit."

FACETIOUS PHILOSOPHY.

There is nothing much more difficult to the obese than the act of obedience.—Boston Courier. The excuse of every man who does not mind his own business is that he is trying to do good.—At-Tison Globe.

FIGURES TO PROVE IT.

The United States collects $639 and spends $461 every minute of the night and day. The most complete failure on record was that of a dry goods store in Chicago. No. The sheriff found just three cents in the money drawer.

Women Sold as Slaves.

Amen Rasi, a handsome Christian Assyrian who is now lecturing in this country, says that men in his country live on 6 cents a day. Women are sold as slaves to work with oxen at the plough. In Damascus, he says, there are 150,000 Christians, 180,000 Mahometans and 5,000 Jews.

World Empire.

A British patriot informs his countrymen that Queen Victoria now rules a population of 290,000,000, a greater number of people than ever acknowledged the sovereignty of any other person in either ancient or modern times. That estimate, however, seems to ignore the present population of the Chinese Empire and that of the Orbis Romanus about the middle of the second century. Considering the enormous aggregate of the crowded provinces of Western Asia, Northern Africa and Southern Europe it is probable that the sceptre of Trajan united territories containing a total of 350,000,000—400,000,000 souls. Many regions of Tunis and Morocco, now buried under the drift-sand of the ever-advancing desert, were once studded with prosperous cities, and, judging from the levies of King Mithridates, Asia Minor must have contained about ten times its present population.—Phila. Times.

CLOTHED IN ARMOR.

Mysterious Revelation at the Death of "Black Whittington," the Scout.

A man died in this state recently, says a Texas correspondent of the Globe-Democrat, who was from first to last a mystery to his friends as well as enemies. A creature of the late war he knew nothing of fear, could submerge himself to the severest hardships without a murmur, was surrounded by an impenetrable mystery and preserved his integrity to the last.

He was one of the best riders and shots in that famous command. His face always held its stern, stony expression, and he was never known to be under the influence of excitement of any kind. Soon he was detailed as a scout, and the only name the soldiers had for him was Whittington, or "Black Whittington, the scout."

He seemed to avoid company, and would never enter into conversation with any one except relative to the service and the business he had on hand. Once Colonel Mohun asked him where he came from. When he had finished his report he said: "Colonel, I try to make a good soldier for the confederacy, and outside of that it is none of your business what I am or where I was born."

In his mysterious way he came and went, and the soldiers of the line came to count on a battle when they saw "Black Whittington" return from one of his trips, always riding at a swift gallop. After the battle of Yellow Tavern, just outside of Richmond, he was not seen for many months.

Many of the soldiers refuged to New Orleans with the intention of going to South America. While there Whittington came in, to their great surprise, for many thought him captured and hanged as a spy. He became involved in a difficulty with some lawless soldiers and killed three. He then went to Mexico and joined Maximilian. He seemed to have been long acquainted with him and his officers, though a companion knew well enough to ask no questions. After the downfall of the emperor he smuggled goods across the border for a time, but finally disappeared, and nothing was heard from him until he returned up a scout of Barrios in Central America. When that campaign was over he came to Texas and lived quietly on a farm until he died.

He died from the effect of a bullet that had lodged near his heart, and very suddenly. When they went to dress him for burial he was completely clothed in a heavy suit of Spanish chain armor, dent'd and battered by bullets that had come in contact with it. The only thing about him that would in any way lead to his identity was a seal ring around his neck with a chain on which was cut an olive branch. People who took an interest in him often tried to trace up his past life and lineage, thinking him to be some noble family and that he had excited himself from some dippant cause, but they were always unsuccessful, and he died as he had lived, without giving a single clue to his identity.

A Trillion of Kisses.

The case of the Plymouth man who had his love-letters procured and read in court should teach other lovers moderation in the making of osculatory contracts, says London Tit-Bits. In a single postscript a Plymouth man undertook to deliver to the lady of his choice no fewer than 1,000,000,000,000 kisses, and as such contracts are not infrequently made in love-letters, it may be well to give a thought to the magnitude of the undertaking.

Women Sold as Slaves.

Whoever will take the trouble to figure it out will find that even if this amorous Southerner should give the lady 15,000 kisses a minute (and we affirm that no person could hope to do more than that), and even if he could keep up this rate of osculation twenty-four hours a day, never pausing to sleep, eat or take a breath, working 365 days every year it would take him more than 100 years to complete the contract, and by that time, it is painful to reflect, the ardor of his love may have cooled.

World Empire.

A British patriot informs his countrymen that Queen Victoria now rules a population of 290,000,000, a greater number of people than ever acknowledged the sovereignty of any other person in either ancient or modern times. That estimate, however, seems to ignore the present population of the Chinese Empire and that of the Orbis Romanus about the middle of the second century.
