THE WORST DAYS.

The weather in the valley last week brought a check to the crops of tobacco and corn. The Housewife, housekeeper and laundry maid will all have much to say about the weather.

The citizens of the town are all feeling the effects of the weather.

TWAS ALL A JOKE.

We should not look for mirth in the morgue. It is a place where the dead are laid out and we should expect to find nothing but death and gloom. However, there is one exception. There is a gentleman who is always seen wearing a smile. His name is John Doe. He is a page boy at the morgue and he always carries a large box of cigars. He is very popular among the patients and they often ask him for a smoke.

On one occasion, a patient asked him for a smoke and he refused. The patient asked why and John Doe replied, "I don't smoke because I want to live."

The patient was surprised and asked, "Why do you want to live?"

John Doe replied, "Because I'm a page boy at the morgue and I don't want to smolder out like a dead cigar."

NAVAL HOUSEKEEPING.

The Officers were United in a Religious Service.

Naval officers before the break of day, without any notice, and without the knowledge of the crew, assembled in the captain's cabin, where a religious service was held. There were present the commodore, the commodore-in-chief, the rear-admiral, and several other officers. The service was conducted by the commodore, and was attended by the entire crew. The officers present were all well pleased with the service, and expressed their satisfaction. The commodore-in-chief stated that he had never before attended a religious service in the navy, and that he was much pleased with the arrangement and the officers present were all well pleased with the service, and expressed their satisfaction.
