WILKINS' HEIFER.

The subject of our present sketch is a young lady of seventeen years, Miss H. Wilkins, of this place. The family lives in a quiet, secluded street, where life is sweet and delightful in every way. The young lady is happily married, and her husband is a man of great ability and much respectability. The union is blessed with two lovely children, a boy and a girl, who are the pride and joy of the family. The young lady is a member of a large and influential family, and her marriage has been the subject of much conversation and speculation. The young lady is well educated, and her household duties are done with great care and attention. She is a kind and considerate wife and mother, and her home is the envy of many a young woman. The family is happy and contented, and their home is a place of peace and joy. The young lady is a member of a large and influential family, and her marriage has been the subject of much conversation and speculation. The young lady is well educated, and her household duties are done with great care and attention. She is a kind and considerate wife and mother, and her home is the envy of many a young woman. The family is happy and contented, and their home is a place of peace and joy.