FREE SILVER VICTORY.

The Free Coinage Bill Passes the Senate on a Square Vote.

Washington special: The political sensation of the day is the passage of the free silver bill by the Senate. After a tie vote on postponement, the bill was taken up and passed by a comfortable majority.

Important Supreme Court Decision.

A recent ruling of the supreme court settles a much disputed point in legal and commercial transactions.

A woman named Moyer, who resides at Grand Lodge, owned a certain piece of property that was sold to John W. Fitzgerald.

Fitzgerald applied for a deed on the grounds that the time for redemption had expired on April 30, which occurred on Saturday.

On that day Mrs. Moyer, by telephone, asked the auditor-general if it would be in time to redeem the land, and was told that it would.

The check for the amount of the delinquent taxes was mailed, but it failed to reach the auditor-general until Monday, the 23rd day of May.

Fitzgerald applied for a deed on the grounds that the time for redemption had expired on April 30, and that he, being the lawful fore-closer, should be entitled to the property.

The auditor-general refused to issue the deed, and Moyer appealed to the supreme court for a mandamus to compel him to do so.

The court held that the assurance of the auditor-general warranted Mrs. Moyer in mailing the check and that a mandamus should not issue.

A Youthful Suicide. Ray Donaldson, 17 years of age, of St. Joseph, has discovered that the course of true love is often over a path paved with boulders.

He has a sweetheart still younger in years than the signing swain, and they better hope that day if it would be in time to redeem the land, and was told that it would.

SENSIBLE NEGROES.

Do Not Indorse All the Race Dynamite Talk Now Current.

Cincinnati special: The national convention of colored men of the United States to consider the interests of the race convened at the Zion Baptist church. Daniel A. Rudd, of Cincinnati, who has been the leader in the matter, announced that it was changed from a delegate convention to a mass meeting and that credentials were required. Mr. Rudd made a glowing speech in which he emphasized the patriotism and fidelity of his race. He counseled moderation and especially culture of hand, head and heart, to the end that the race might command respect and deserve fair treatment. "We need no dynamite," he declared, "we are willing to trust to an enlightened common sense and to the judgment of men who must attend the justice of our demands." This sentiment was warmly applauded. He named one of the bills now affected the colored race in America and said all they asked was to be treated as well as the Indian or other races in this country.

By MAT D. BLOSSER
THURSDAY, JULY 1, 1892.
WOMEN of late years have entered many vocations formerly opened only to men, but very few of them pay as well as household work. Not only does this line of work secure better pay, but where the operator is skilled the hours of work are shorter than in many other vocations and the fatigue less.

Drill means let the dogs have all the happy liberty which their owners desire for them, but in the name of common sense, let them have it under such conditions as will not make them a menace to that portion of the public which does not care to come into contact with the active principle of bark when there is danger of its being impregnated with hydrophobic bacillus.

It is a good thing that we increase our miles of railroads and tons of coal; that our manufacturing statistics show an increase and that our wealth is beyond computation. These are good things to have. But a nation that has no property in its literature misses the refinement of beauty that has its value even though it cannot be measured in dollars.

On the mud roads and in the forests of this country, a squadron of bicyclists would not be able to accomplish much. But the roads can be and ought to be reconstructed. If the plucky and hardy bicyclists succeed in giving a lift to the movement for the betterment of American roads they will lay our armies of the future through in fair shape. Of course the ration would be one gale deflated of nitrogen, but this is a sacrifice that the nation should be willing to make.

Preserving Eggs a Nuisance.
Indubitably the honest, intelligent and skillful poultryman would be benefited by the use of the egg preserver of season. It would be better, also, for the mass of customers. No matter how long the eggs are kept, they are preserved in quality. They are not so liable to rot as those of the open season. It would be better, also, for the mass of customers. The prevalent rage for the introduction of foreign habits and usages in this country is reaching its height. It is not only the public or any individual who believe that the civilization of the new world ought to be symbolical in all of its features of the land of its origin, but the government itself. The customs of any country are— or at least ought to be—the outgrowth of its history. They typify, as a nation's history, the character of the people to which they belong and are the fruit of those intimate personal experiences which affect the most sacred interests of humanity.

WORKERS were full professors in the Italian universities, and in the eighteenth century, when the convulsion of Europe allowed learning in the clasp of arms. They were in chains of science, of reason, of progress, that these women are forgotten; that those institutions are not recalled to set forth precedent for later justice, show how completely high culture among women has disappeared, and the pretentious modern dispensation which imagines that is granting revolutionary privileges for women when it is only restoring opportunities which they enjoyed when the world was generally supposed to have been in the morning dusk of intelligence.

We have imbedded in our very constitutions provisions for object entails and imprigment, the object being to prevent the undue concentration of wealth in the hands of a hereditary aristocracy of money. But the families that possess great fortunes have managed to barter their estates over to the state, and in obedience to family traditions, only an insignificant portion of their enormous accumulations is bequeathed for any public use. These accumulations are not distributed at death by an equal apportionment among the children, as our law, for wise purposes, intends, but are transmitted in whole or in part to one son, with such portions only to the other children as may be granted without leaving the main fortune less than it was at the beginning of the former generation.

That Columbus was a sailor of his age was not remarkable, and his discovery of the position as a discoverer of the world. If his hemisphere had been obliged to remain undiscovered until some hardy sailor came along, it would have been discovered by some other discoverer. It would be a day when the first cargo of iron and steel development. There were many sails, exactly like Columbus in his day, but his claim to immortal fame lies in the fact that he was the one of them all who declared the globe to be round and the earth and to stake his life on the voyage which gave the American continents to civilization. It is no serious drawback to his fame that he was a discoverer of the world. The men who have those faults and yet achieve great success are best entitled to their fame.

MUSIC SAVED HIS LIFE.
THE THRILLING EXPERIENCE OF A BRAVE BOY.
Waked Up at Night by a Deadly Serpent on His Bed—He Sang and Chanted the Music and the Snake Then Stopped.

Well-ventilated sleeping rooms are very desirable, but a bamboo mat and not far off from an Indian jungle, is not exactly an inviting bed chamber. In a thatched hut such a place has never reached the state when he noticed a large number of flies buzzing about him in a very troubling manner. He made several attempts to drive them away, but in vain. He was suddenly, as he looked around in the moonlight of the blanket, he saw a snake coiled around his neck. He was so startled that he did not know what to do. He was so startled that he did not know what to do.

It was not a pleasant predicament, and there seemed to be no way out of it. If there were three or four snakes, it would be a very different matter. The man was so startled that he did not know what to do. He was so startled that he did not know what to do.

QUEER ANIMALS IN MINES.
Albino Pigs and White Rattansake Found Below the Earth.

In connection with the resumption of mining at the famous "Blue Lead" in this section a most peculiar discovery was made by a Hagerman miner at the San Francisco Extension. Among the mines now being worked the old Fort Miller mine owned by Mrs. Bishop mines. When the Bishop mine was first opened the first discovery was made by a Hagerman miner at the San Francisco Extension.

A REAL SUMMER GIRL.
SHE IS ONLY TO BE SEEN ON HER BICYCLE.

For the bicycling girl, the nearest approach to a perfect creature that tall, fair, and well-proportioned, is the "summer girl." She is only to be seen on her bicycle. She is only to be seen on her bicycle.

THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1892.

Lenawee County

Adrian light guards were in camp at Sand Lake on the 4th and participated in a sham battle.

The dam at the white mill at Adrian was carried away by the high water in Raisin river on Saturday night.

Three car loads of Pinkerton detectives passed through Adrian Tuesday en route to the scene of the iron workers strike at Homestead—near Pittsburg, Pa.

The Clinton woolen mills have purchased about 7000 lbs of wool they need for the present and some farmers fear that prices will be lower in consequence.

The building and loan association loaned all the money they had on hand last evening. The total loans of the association now amount to over $75,000, and over $100 is paid into the treasury every week for interest.—Times.

The republicans of Tecumseh have decided to start a paper advocating the principles of the G. O. P.—Both the News and Herald have decided democratic leanings and the republicans have long felt somewhat wrathful over it.

David Woodward of Clinton had a fine young St. Bernard dog. Last Friday a bull dog thought that he could chew him up. The St. Bernard did not let go at the end of the first round. Bull dog no good now except for ornament. Woodward's dog died on the 4th of July, cause—to be found out.

Jackson County Items.

A Jackson county republican club has been organized.

A fighting rooster attacked a little girl at Jackson and injured her considerably.

Andrew Mulberry was found guilty of stealing wheat at Concord and fined $30.

The Jackson celebration was a success. It is estimated that 20,000 strangers visited the city.

Two little girls, 11 and 13 years of age, broke into a building at Jackson and stole goods.

Abe Lincoln's hat, the one he wore on his journey from Springfield to Washington, has been on exhibition at Jackson.

The Citizen discounts at length on the disgusting and nauseating nuisance, the Grand (?) river, which flows through that city.

The salvation army has struck Jackson and pitched their tent for a season's work. That and the jag institute ought to do some good there.

A scheme was talked at Jackson last week which, if carried out, would have been a drawing card. They proposed to secure "Prince Michael," the head of the house of Israel, and place him upon a float to be drawn through the streets at the head of the procession.

The Grass Lake Newsman is in trouble with the ministers because in speaking of the open and defiant violation of the Sunday laws by the railroads, he said the pulpit would say nothing against it because they were "bribed" with half-fare tickets. That word bribed grates harshly upon their sensibilities.

Washtenaw County.

The Chelsea band will go to Washington with the G. A. R.

The trees around the court house square are being trimmed. One large tree was removed. The work will add greatly to the beauty of the square.—Times.

Charles Woodruff, whose labors upon the Sentinel have been continuous—save when interrupted by sickness—since 1844, is enjoying a short vacation this week in attending the commencement of his alma mater, Allegheny college, Meadville, Pa., from which college he was graduated in 1841.—Sentinel.

It is not known as yet whether the case against Eliza Courts will be tried in the Washtenaw court or not. When informed that Prosecutor Burroughs would see that she received a light sentence if she pleaded guilty, she laughed and replied "Why, I can't do that, I can't confess a crime I never committed."—Register.

There will not be enough people left in Ann Arbor in two weeks to compose the traditional guard of the corporal. It is the fashion now to migrate for the summer, and everybody makes it a point to go somewhere, even if they have to walk, and help feed the mosquitoes no farther away than Geddes. The fashionable family—and where is the family that is not—must go, and go they do.—Courier. That sounds strange from a paper that recommends Ann Arbor as a summer resort.

Making and Preparing Butter.

The south La Keon farmers' club tackled this important question at its last meeting. We clip a portion of the report from the Citizen:

The question, "The care of milk and the best method of making and preparing butter," was taken in hand by Mrs. W. M. Dodge. She said, "My experience teaches me that the best results are obtained by the creamery process, as a much better and more uniform article of cream and butter can be produced than in any other way I know of."

"1st. The creamery, with its ventilation and deep setting of cans in cold water, with ice if preferred, keeps milk sweet and cool.

"2nd. The top of the creamery can be never decorated with spiders and flies, nor will you find any foreign substance in the cream.

"3rd. The thunder storm, the one thing so much dreaded by those using pans, never has any bad effect. The cream raised in this way never becomes hard or has any white specks or false cream in it. I use the Wilson cabinet creamery with satisfactory results. There is no lifting out of cans or skimming from the top, the milk and cream being removed by the opening of a faucet at the bottom of the can. The milk from ten cows can be cared for in a much better way in the same time that it takes to care for the milk of two cows with pans.

Now, in making butter I think that ordinarily there a great loss arising from not properly mixing and making the different skimmings of cream uniformly ripe before churning. I would advise the use of the dairy thermometer so to be sure you are right before beginning to churn. If you wish butter made from sweet cream churn the cream while sweet. It should first be brought to the proper temperature for churning as follows: Sixty to 62° in summer and 62 to 66° in winter. If you prefer it made from sour cream let the cream stand until it thickens and becomes slightly acid. The cream should have ventilation and be stirred occasionally; sweet cream and sour should never be mixed just before churning, as the sweet cream churns harder, therefore is likely to be lost in the buttermilk. I use the Bachelour barrel churn and think it preserves the grain of the butter and for that reason makes a finer quality than any churn I have ever seen with paddles or ladies inside. I think it best to rinse the buttermilk from the butter and I find the churn the most convenient place for so doing after the buttermilk has been removed. In salting the butter, I use the best fine dairy salt, scattering it evenly through the churn, working it but little. I then set it away until the salt is dissolved. In preparing it for market or packing it for winter use, great care should be taken to remove all the buttermilk so the butter will keep sweet and not be streaked. Creamery butter brings from three to 10 cents per pound more than ordinary dairy butter and will weigh more to the gallon, being much more solid than when made by the old process. I am happy to say that at present the price of butter depends largely on the quality, and is not sold by weight alone. I use the following receipt for brine for packing butter: For a three-gallon crock, take one and a half quarts of boiling water, add to this one tablespoonful of granulated sugar, one tea-spoonful saltpeter, and salt until it will dissolve no more. Cool, strain and pour over the butter, allowing it to remain in the crock while using the butter.

The question arose as to the cause of white specks in butter, and was attributed to cream being exposed to the air, as they do not form in cream raised in a creamery.

Mrs. Richard Crouch said they were caused by hot air, and from not skimming at the proper time.

Mrs. Strong said they were caused by dry air.

Mrs. Edwards said it was not that, for they were caused by dampness—so, now—and streaks in the butter were caused by washing it. A wet cloth laid over butter will bleach it.

Mrs. Dodge insisted that streaks in butter were caused by buttermilk not being removed.

The discussion began to take on a serious aspect and for the good of the club Secretary Edwards arose, and in an impressive manner read article 6 of the constitution, and the question continued.

Mrs. Crouch said butter was streaked by being salted unevenly.

Mrs. Hutchins thought the condition of the atmosphere caused flakes—a milk room or cellar needed to be thoroughly ventilated—and if butter was streaked, whatever may be the cause, it can be dispelled by thorough working.

Mrs. Neely asked, "How are you always going to have butter come hard in hot weather if you have no ice?"

Mrs. Edwards said soft butter was caused by allowing men and boys to do the churning, as they churn too fast.

Drs. Dodge said the thing to do was to stop when the butter comes, and Mr. Goldsmith said he never saw any one who wasn't willing to.

Fearful lest Mr. Edwards might again deem it necessary to refer to article 6 of the constitution, the presidential gavel called the question to a close.

The Three Rivers business men are mad at the Michigan Central railroad company and are going to do all their shipping by the Lake Shore. They will know more after they have dealt with the Lake Shore white and had the same experience as other towns on the Lake Shore line.—Detroit Journal.

THE ROCKY MOUNTAIN LIMITED, AND "THE BIG 5."

Two Grand Trains Daily Between the World's Fair City and the Foot hills. One Night Out or One Day Out. Take Your Choice. Business Demands It, and the People Must Have It.

The popularity of the "Great Rock Island Route" as a Colorado line—it having a long time since taken first place as the people's favorite between the lakes and the mountains—has compelled the management to increase its present splendid service by the addition of a train that is one night on the road from Chicago to Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo. This train will be known as the "Rocky Mountain Limited," and will be put in service May 1st. Leaves Chicago daily at 10:45 a. m., arriving in above cities in the afternoon of next day, earlier than any of its competitors. Special equipment has been built for this train, with the view of making it a limited in every sense of the word, and best of all, there will be no extra charge. The route of this exceedingly fast train is by the Rock Island Short Line, and a few of the large cities through which it passes are Des Moines, Davenport, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Lincoln, Beatrice, Fairbury, Belleville, Phillipsburg, Smith Center, Colby and Goodland. This makes it a very desirable route, and particularly interesting to the traveler. Another point: The popularity of our dining car service is on the increase, and no money spared to make this service what our patrons always say, "the best."

Our "Big 5" will continue as usual, leaving Chicago at 10 p. m., and arriving at Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo the second morning, being but one day out, and this fast and popular train goes through Omaha.

Our No. 11 will leave as heretofore at 6 p. m., arrive at Kansas City at 9 a. m., and will reach Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo the second morning.

Our Colorado service is made perfect by this new Rocky Mountain Limited and the Big 5, and gives to the traveling public two flyers daily.

Manitou passengers should consult the map and time tables of our line, to fully appreciate the advantages in time saved by taking this route, when on their summer vacation. JOHN SEBASTIAN, G. T. & P. A., Chicago.

PURPOSE.

How I know I comprehend better and better at each year's end.
Deeper and deeper I seem to see why and wherefore it has to be.
Only after the dark wet days do we fully rejoice in the sun's bright rays.
Sweeter the cruet tastes after the fast than the salt gourmand's finest repast.
The faintest cheer sounds never amiss to the actor who once has heard a hiss.
And one who has dwelt with his grief alone.
Hear all the music in friendship's tone.
So, better and better I comprehend how sorrow ever would be our friend.

A SHADOW CAST BEFORE.

Several years ago I was traveling in the State of Wisconsin, in the interest of a Southern tobacco factory. Traveling men were scarce. My sparse lonesome and suffered many hardships of which the travelers of today know but little. Consequently I was glad to meet a pleasant companion as John Sturtevant.
Sturtevant was my senior by probably ten years a handsome man, prematurely gray, clean shaven, save for a moustache of a brownish color, which contrasted queerly with his rapidly silencing hair.
One pleasant summer night a few nights after our first meeting I invited him into my room (just across the hall from his in the little frame hotel).

Our conversation turned upon some remark which I cannot recall, but in the same manner that thousands of conversations have turned before into the supernatural—dreams especially.
He then related to me the following story, which I give in his own language, as accurately as my memory serves me, and I am positive that I have forgotten no incident connected with it.

Laying his pipe on the table near by, he began thus:
"I cannot say, even after the experience I am about to relate that I place much credence in dreams this one being the only one I have ever been able to trace to anything like tangibility. I am sure that I am no more superstitious than the average of men, and I have always chosen to attribute the fulfillment of any dream to chance or coincidence rather than to any other cause.
"Fourteen years ago last winter I was in identical the same position which I now fill excepting the fact that I am now directing the movements of a few men. You will know, of course that at this time I was a young man—to be accurate 23 years of age. At the time of which I speak I was on my mission trip, and as though to insure me to the trials and hardships of a traveler's life the house had kept me out almost a year without so much as a twenty-four hours visit to the city in which my parents resided, and which for the lack of any other, my parents being dead, I still claim as my home."
Here he hesitated and passed his hand through his hair. He seemed to be lost in meditation or in trying to think where he should begin again. Presently he said:

"I will not worry you with the details of a love story, but let us it to say that this same city was the abode of my sweetheart Mary, whom I had known in infancy, whom I had loved from childhood, and to whom I had been betrothed for two years. I held close and regular correspondence with her, and her entreaties for me to come home were at times pitiful. However, wishing upon this trip above all others to convince them that they need have no fear of my becoming homeless, I had never asked for leave of absence.
At last, about the 1st of December, a letter reached me from the house while I was in Alabama, stating that after the 10th inst. all traveling agents will be at liberty until January 1st, and wishing us a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. Of course I was extremely well pleased, and mentally calculated that after the day's labor was completed on the 10th I would board the 9 p. m. train for Nashville and reach home by the morning of the 12th.

"Rising early on the night of December 10th, from no unusual excitement or physical excitement, I fell into what appeared to me to be a peaceful sleep in which I dreamed that I stood at the rear entrance of a strange brick house, one which I had never seen in my waking moments, but every exterior detail of which I seemed to note carefully and still remember. Why and how I was supposed to be there or why I was at the rear door, I do not know, but I was perfectly sure that it was proper to be there, and also equally sure that this house was Mary's home. I knelt upon the door and was admitted by Mary's sister, who though it seemed not in the least strange to me, expressed but very little concern at seeing me, merely saying, 'Mary is in the front parlor,' and as persons do in dreams, disappeared. I was alone. A heavy survey of the room. I noticed that it seemed in such a disorder as results from moving before articles are placed in their proper positions. I scanned things closely. A pair of lady's shoes were in the middle of the room close to the leg of a center table. A lounge was in the center and against one of the curtains which hung over a folding door, the other curtain being drawn, disclosing a small room, in which the only article of furniture visible through the curtains was a bureau, such as were so much used at that time.

"It is needless for me to mention every object which I seemed to examine in that one brief moment, though I recall everything vividly, even to the carpet the wall paper, the hanging pictures and their frames; suffice it to say that Mary stood in the front of the bureau in the little room. She was wearing a black hair hanging over her shoulders, while she searched for something in the topmost drawer, her sister's ignorance of my presence. I gazed upon her a moment and called her name. She turned toward me with a look of widest surprise, which quickly changed to one of joy as she rushed toward me with outstretched arms, crying aloud my name. I advanced toward her. As she threw the curtain further back, in her wild state, her foot caught under a rug which lay in the doorway, and she began to fall. I leaped forward

TALMAGE IN EUROPE.

EUROPEANS TURN OUT TO HEAR THE BROOKLYN DIVINE.
Large and Enthusiastic Audiences Greet Him Everywhere - A Sermon On the Life and Death of Jesus Christ.
London, England, July 3, 1892. - Dr. Talmage continues to receive from all classes of the English people the warmest of welcomes and the heartiest greetings. The work of arranging his tour has been exceedingly difficult. So numerous were the invitations and requests that to accept some and decline others equally pleasing seemed inevitable. Wherever he has gone the largest churches in the cities have been crowded to excess and could have been filled many times over. Among the sermons he has preached, the one selected for publication this week is from the text, Matthew 27:22: "What shall I do with Jesus?"
Pilate was an unprincipled politician. He had sympathies, convictions of right, and desires to be honest; but all these were submerged by a wish to be popular, and to please the people. Two distinguished prisoners were in the grasp of government, and the proposition was made to free one of them. There stands Barabbas, the murderer; there stands Christ, the Saviour of the world. At the demand of the people the renegade is set free, but Jesus is held. As the hour dragged and cruel-eyed Barabbas goes among his sympathizers, receiving their coarse congratulations, Pilate turns to his other distinguished prisoner—mild, meek, inoffensive, loving, self-sacrificing—and he is confounded as to what course he had better take, so he impetually the mob as a jury to decide, saying to them, "What shall I do then with Jesus?"
Oh, it is no dried or withered question, but one that throbs with warm and quick pulse in the heart of every man and woman here. We must do something with Jesus. He is here. You and I are not so certainly here as he is, for he fills all this place; the loving, living, dying Christ, and we are here, and we must do something for himself the question, "What shall I do then with Jesus?" Well, my friends, there are three or four things you can do with him.
You can, in the first place, let him stand without a word of recognition; but I do not think your sense of common courtesy will allow that. He comes walking on such a long journey, you will certainly give him a chair on which he may sit. He is so weary, you would not let him stand without recognition. If a beggar comes to your door, you recognize him and say, "What do you want?" If you meet a stranger faint in the streets, you say, "What is the matter with you?" and you show sympathy, and your common sense of propriety will not allow you to let him stand without recognition—the wounded one of the hills. You will ask, what makes him weep? where was he hurt? who wounded him? whence he came? whither he goes? I know there have been men who have with outrageous indifference hated Christ, but I know very well that that is not what you do with Jesus.
Another thing that you can do with him—you can thrust him back from your heart, and tell him to stand aside. If an inoffensive person comes and persists in standing close up to you, and you have in various ways given him no understanding that you do not want his presence or his society, then you ask the reason of his impudence and bid him away. Well, that is what we can do with Jesus. He has stood close by us a great while—ten, twenty, thirty, forty years. He has stood close by you three times a day, breaking bread for your household, all night watching by your pillow. He has been in the nursery among your children, he has been in the store among your goods, he has been in the factory amid the flying wheels, and now if you do not like his society you can bid him away; say, if he will not go you can take him by the throat and tell him you do not want his interference, that you do not want his breath on your cheek, that you do not want his eye on your behavior. You can bid him away, or if he will not go in that way, then you can stamp your foot as you would at a dog, and cry, "Begone!" Yet I know you will not treat Jesus that way. When Pilate could not do that, you could not. Desperadoes and outlaws might do so, but I know that that is not the way you will treat him, that that is not what you will do with Jesus. There is another thing you can do with him; you can look on him merely as an optician to cure blind eyes, or an artist to paint a picture, or a friend; or a good friend; or a helpful companion; a cheerful passer-by on the shipboard; but that will amount to nothing. You can look upon him as a God, and be abashed while he rouses the storm, or blasts the fig-tree, or heaves a rock down the mountain side. That will not do you any good; no more save your soul than the admiration you have for John Milton or William Shakespeare. I can think of only one more thing you can do with him, and that is to take him into your hearts. That is the best thing you can do with him; that is the only safe thing you can do with him; and may the Lord Omnipotent by his Spirit help me to persuade you to do that. A minister of Christ was speaking to some children, and said, "If I were in the audience, and came up and put her hand in the hand of the pastor, and said, 'Please, sir, take me to Jesus now. I want to go now.' Oh, that it might be now with such simplicity of experience that you and I join hands and seek after Christ and get an expression of his benediction and his mercy!
You may take Christ into your confidence. If you cannot trust him, whom can you trust? I do not offer you a dry, theological technicality. I simply ask you to come and put both feet on the "Rock of Ages." Take hold of Christ's hands and draw him to your soul with perfect abandonment, and hurl yourself into the deep sea of his mercy. He cannot say, 'I will save you.' If you do not think he is a hypocrite and a liar when he says that, believe him, and say, 'Lord Jesus, I believe; here is my heart. Wash it. Save it. Do it now. As it is done; for I obey thy promise and come. I can do more. That is all thou hast asked. I come. Christ is mine. Pardon is mine. Heaven is mine.'
My friends, you put more trust in everything than you do in Christ, and in everything; more trust in the bridge crossing the stream, in the

LESSON II—JULY 10—THE DESCENT OF THE SPIRIT.
Golden Text: When He, the Spirit of Truth, is Come, He Will Guide You Into All Truth—Acts 2: 1-12.
Introductory.—There were 120 disciples, most of them Galileans. This number included the eleven apostles; the brethren of Jesus; and the women who were the devoted followers of Jesus. Among them were Mary the mother of Jesus, Mary Magdalene, Mary the wife of Clopas, Joanna the wife of Chuza, Susanna, Salome, Mary and Martha of Bethany. During the ten days of waiting the disciples chose Matthias to take the place of Judas.
1. The Promise Fulfilled.—Vers. 1-3. 1. "And when the day of Pentecost was fully come." Soon after dawn, some time before nine o'clock, the third hour. "With one accord in one place." Rev. Ver.: "Were all together in one place." Moved by a common impulse.
2. "And suddenly." Without previous indication. "There came a sound from heaven." As an outward expression of the great spiritual reality. "As of a rushing, mighty wind." It is not said that there was any wind but only a sound as of a wind. "It filled all the house." As a token that it filled every part and faculty of the soul.
3. "And there appeared." To the entire assembly. "Cloven tongues like as of fire." Rev. Ver.: "Tongues parting asunder." Not tongues of fire, but tongues of a fiery, burning appearance. "And it sat upon each of them." There appears to have been no discrimination between the apostles and disciples or between men and women.—Abbott. The symbol of the flame represented the light which should shine into each mind, the light which the disciples should impart to the world, the resistless power with which the spirit consumes evil. The symbol of the tongue represented the means by which they were to spread the gospel. The tongue is the instrument of the grandest war ever waged.
4. The Effects of the Outpouring of the Spirit.—Vers. 4-12. 4. "And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost." A study of all the passages in which this expression is found leads to the conclusion that being filled with the Holy Spirit implies a reception of extraordinary powers, in addition to sanctifying grace. "Began to speak with other tongues." Other than their common tongue. This showed what had been meant by the promise of speaking with new tongues.
5. "And there were dwelling at Jerusalem." Both permanent residents and pilgrims who had come up to the feast. "Devout men." Truly religious men, waiting for the appearance of the promised Messiah. "Out of every nation under heaven." Only a comparatively small number of Jews lived in Palestine.
6. "Now when this was noised abroad." The Greek word for sound is never used for "report" or "rumor." It must mean the sound of the wind which was heard upon the streets. "The multitude came together." The house may have been on one of the avenues to the temple. "And were thrown into confusion and excitement." "Every man heard them speak in his own language." Each of the disciples spoke in some one tongue, so that all were heard.
7. "Are not all these Galileans?" All the apostles were natives of Galilee. Provincial, usually of little culture.
8. "In our own tongue wherein we were born." The gospel belongs to all languages and makes all people one.
9. 10. "Parthians, Medes, Elamites, in the Persian kingdom." "Mesopotamia," the country between the Tigris and Euphrates. "Judea." The Aramaic tongue. "Cappadocia," Pontus, Asia, Phrygia, Pamphylia. All countries in Asia Minor. "Egypt." There were vast numbers of Jews resident in Egypt. "The parts of Libya about Cyrene." To the west of Egypt. "Strangers from Rome." A Latin-speaking people. "Jews and proselytes." Jews by birth and converts from heathenism.
11. "Crete." Natives of Crete, now called Candia. "Arabians." Large numbers of Jews settled in Arabia. "The wonderful works of God." The disciples praised God in these different languages.
12. "Were all amazed and were in doubt." Rev. Ver.: "amazed and perplexed." Knew not what to make of what they saw and heard.

A TRAMP'S GIFT.

It was at the hour when the shades of night begin to fall and the cures wander homeward to roost.

"I can not repay you in sound for your kindness, madam. But here is a little puzzle which may serve to while away an idle hour."

When Isham G. Hicks, the husband of the benevolent lady, returned home some what later, he found the wife of his heart suffering from an violent headache.

When Mrs. Hicks awoke in the gray of the morning, her husband was not by her side. As she stepped quietly to the sitting-room door, she heard him say, in dreary monotone:

Hicks remained in bed all that forenoon, with ice on his brow, and muttered drearly sentences like these: "His wife is his baby's half-brother's half-nephew's mother's son-in-law—no that isn't it! His son's wife is his own mother-in-law and mother of his grandson's half-sister—um! um! His mother-in-law is—oh, dear me!"

MEANWHILE Mrs. Hicks sprang the puzzle at the sewing-circle that afternoon, and the minister ran up against it and felt, and thus it was spread all over town.

INDIA'S ROYAL SPORT.

HUNTING THE TIGER WITH ELEPHANTS IN THE EAST.

Any Way the Sport is Dangerous, but Hunting the Feroocious Beast on Foot Has Most Perils—The Maharajah's Victory.

Tiger hunting, which I may term the characteristic sport of India, is certainly very exciting. It requires a brave man to kill a tiger.

On the night before the day of the hunt the men who intend engaging in the sport begin to make ready by getting their guns in order and preparing food.

After arriving the attendants first let two or three sheep loose. The sheep go into the jungle and the tiger smells them and comes out, thinking it will have a toothsome breakfast.

When the preliminaries are completed the cascade starts for the hunting grounds or jungles as they are called. These they reach at about 10 o'clock.

Years ago, according to the Indian tradition, a buck and his squaw were on a journey down the Missouri river to visit some relatives at a distant point.

When the tiger is sighted, the hunters keep up all the time the tiger is in sight. If the tiger is not killed by a shot from the hunters he jumps at the elephants.

After they have done all this they come down. Then they tie several sheep to trees with iron chains.
